GOSHEN COLLEGE

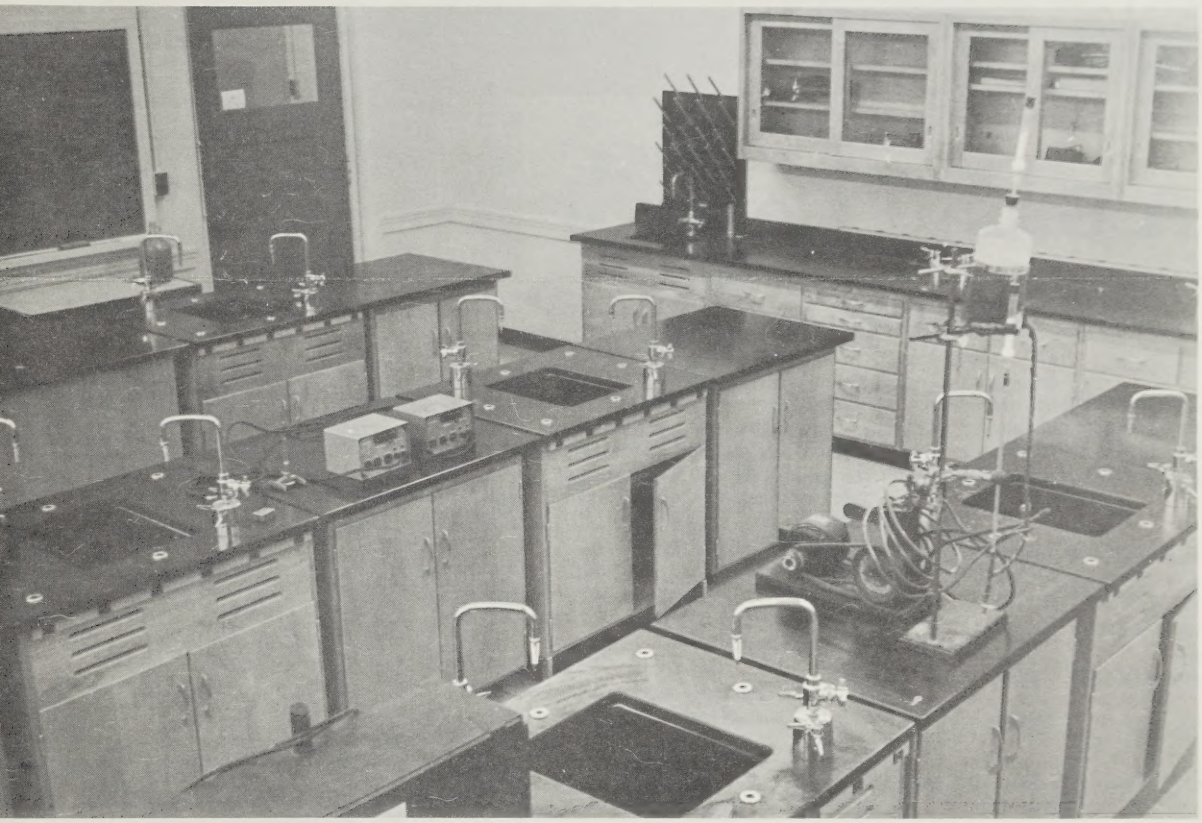
New Look in Science Hall



There is a 'new look' in Goshen's Science Building.

An extensive renovation and remodeling of the interior of the structure was begun this summer and is now virtually completed. The project was financed primarily by a grant of $93,450. from Lilly Endowment, Inc.

The project included the construction of several new laboratories, two new lecture rooms, a complete renovation and refitting of faculty offices, and a refinishing of walls and hallways throughout the building.

The four-story building was erected in 1915, and has had no essential modification until the present time. It is used by the physics, biology, mathematics, and chemistry departments, and includes classroom, laboratory, and office space.

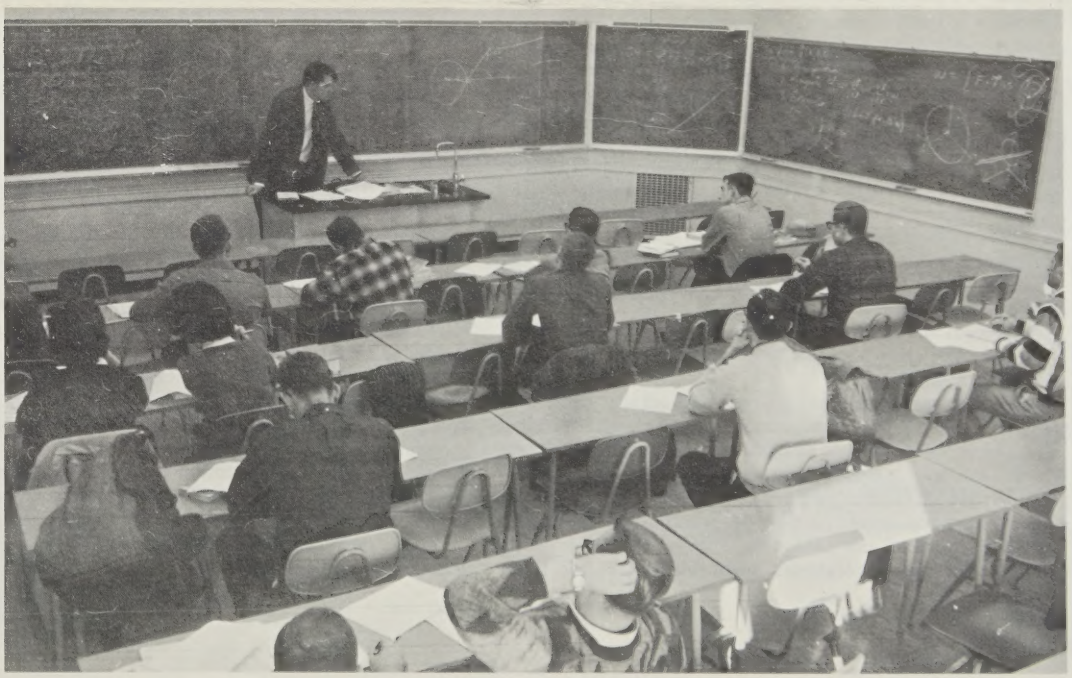
All students are required to take eight hours of work in the science department. Students who major in one of the sciences and pre-med students spend a major portion of their study time in this building. Nursing students also take a major amount of the course work in the sciences.

The completion of this project gives Goshen one of the finest physical facilities available. Goshen's science faculty, long noted for its high quality, is now equipped with some of the finest tools available for the teaching of science.

NEW LABORATORIES like the one pictured above, have been constructed throughout the building. The laboratory pictured is used for advanced chemistry classes. It contains the most modern laboratory furniture available.

NEW OFFICE fixtures and furnishings for members of the Science faculty are included in the remodeling project. Office pictured at left is used by Dr. Glen Miller, chairman of the chemistry department.

NEW CLASSROOMS, like the one pictured below, were also included in the remodeling and renovation project. The one pictured is located on the second floor in the area once used as a studio for the art department.



Special Issue on Science Department

The completion of the Science Hall remodeling (see page 1) is a good time to take an intensive look at what goes on inside its classrooms and laboratories. Many persons seem to feel that science is now too complex for the small college—that only the large university can deal with the rapid explosion of scientific knowledge. As the article below indicates, just exactly the opposite may be the case. The science department has maintained a very high level of quality in both laboratory equipment and faculty training, as the pictures and article at right indicate. And added to real excellence in its academic standards, Goshen's instruction in this area includes the plus of Christian commitment, as illustrated in the article at far right.

Can A Small College Teach Science Today?

Barely fifty years ago our fathers and grandfathers were still doing their traveling in horse and buggy and joking about the moon being made of cheese. Today it is possible to completely orbit the earth in 90-odd minutes and plans are being made to land a man on the moon.

'Explosion'

These fifty years have been the greatest period of material advance in human history, and the one thing that has made them possible has been an extremely rapid advance in scientific knowledge. It is an advance so rapid, in fact, that scientists call it an 'explosion'.

While this explosion has made our lives easier and healthier in innumerable ways, it has also made the job of the science faculties of our colleges and universities much more difficult.

Here are some of their problems:

The increased interest in science has resulted in increased enrollments in all areas of the natural sciences. This has meant in turn that more classrooms and laboratories and teachers must be provided.

The explosion has put a heavy burden on the teacher. He must constantly continue his own education in order to keep pace with the advances of knowledge in his particular field.

The Small College

Because of these problems many people are now asking this question: "Can the small college continue to offer a quality education in the sciences?"

Paradoxically the answer may be that the small college, with its emphasis on teaching, may in the future, produce an even larger number of the nation's scientists than it has in the past. For as the complexity of science increases, the skill and effort required to teach it also increase.

Goshen has a long history of excellence in science instruction. A study conducted by the U. S. Public Health Service lists Goshen as one of the nation's leading sources of medical students in the years 1950-59.

But Goshen has also built on its past record to keep pace with the times: in laboratory space, laboratory equipment, and in faculty training.

The recent remodeling of Science Hall (see p. 1) provided laboratory and classroom facilities that rank among the finest available anywhere.

Continued substantial purchases of laboratory equipment make it possible for Goshen's students to work with the most advanced laboratory tools available (see photos at right). An Atomic Energy Commission grant of approximately $8,000 was awarded to Goshen recently to provide for the purchase of laboratory equipment to be used in radio-isotope studies.

But the heart of any college or university is its teaching faculty. The finest laboratories, filled with all of the latest equipment, are useless unless a skilled and dedicated teacher is available to use them.

It is in the area of teaching where the greatest strength in Goshen's science program lies. The story at right shows that nine out of ten members of Goshen's science faculty hold the most advanced training available in their respective fields—that is the earned doctoral degree.

The fact that virtually all of the science faculty hold this degree means that nearly all courses at Goshen—from the freshman to the senior level—are taught by persons who have the most advanced training available.

Alumni Successful

The most convincing proof that a small college can excel in the teaching of science is the record which Goshen's graduates have made in all areas of science.

Goshen graduates now occupy responsible leadership positions in medicine: as specialists, researchers, and general practicioners. Students from Goshen have been accepted by all the major medical colleges.

Goshen alumni now serve on the faculties of many other colleges and universities, and in numerous high schools. Other graduates occupy important positions in the research departments of many of the nation's largest corporations. Goshen students are readily accepted by all the major graduate schools.

Persons now working in engineering, pharmacy, agriculture, medical technology, and x-ray technology have received their pre-professional training at Goshen, transferring to a specialized school later for their final professional work.

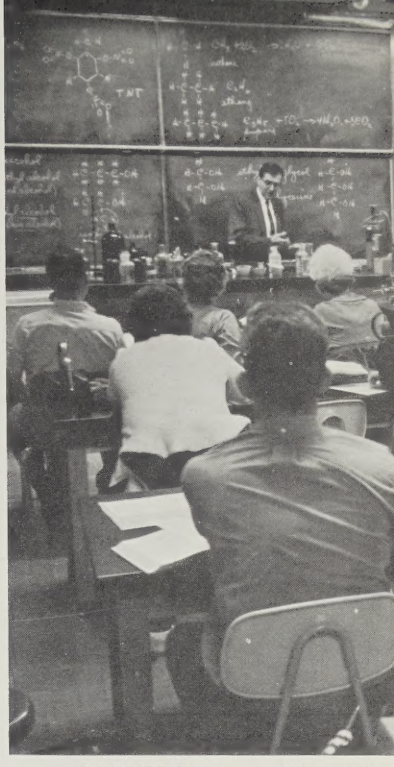
Liberal Arts and Science

Dr. George Wells Beadle, president of the University of Chicago and an outstanding scientist, said recently: "The swift advance in scientific knowledge and the strong emphasis given to the need for scientists should not obscure the base on which so much civilized enterprise rests—our knowledge and understanding of our heritage as human beings."

Liberal arts education stands for the idea that an educated person must have a broad background of knowledge. Goshen, as a liberal arts college, believes that a scientist should have some background in literature, for instance—and in the same way, that a student majoring in literature should also know something about science.

The nation's liberal arts colleges, including Goshen, will continue to have a large part to play in the teaching of science. Because they are teaching institutions (rather than specializing in research or graduate study) thay can offer the undergraduate student the individual attention he needs. And because they are liberal arts schools they can offer him the broad background he will need in a world with constantly widening horizons.

Can the small college teach science today? The answer seems to be that it can—and that it is.



PHYSICS LAB now includes new furn

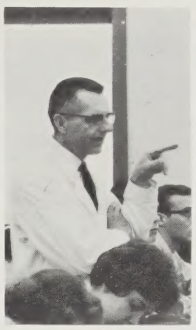
How a Christian Teaches Science

Goshen's science teachers are not only highly trained specialists (story at right)—they are also firmly convinced Christians. What effect, if any, does this have on their teaching?

A semester examination which Dr. C. Franklin Bishop prepared for his freshman biology course provides an interesting example of the impact of his faith on the way he teaches biology.

The test is long and it is tough (the highest percentage scored was 90%). The first three pages are filled with questions like these:



Dr. Bishop

"The body cells of the human are diploid in chromosome number." True or false?

"A female pine cone is most nearly like (botanically speaking): a strawberry, a dandelion blossom, a banana, an ear of corn, a bouquet of violets." (The answer is an ear of corn).

But on the fourth page this question appears: "Do you believe that man may succeed in synthesizing living material from non-living material? Assuming that this is accomplished at some time, what, if any, influence will this have on the argument for or against God?"

Dr. Bishop says that he included this question in the exam to test the students' ability to use the mass of facts that they are required to learn during the semester. But the answers to this question also indicate the basic undercurrent of faith that runs through Goshen's entire program.

The answer which most of the students gave was similar to this one: "This feat wouldn't influence the argument for or against God much as far as I am concerned because synthesizing is a far cry from creating and there had to be a beginning."

Several students added short personal comments to their test papers, like these:

"I feel that this is an excellent question and that it really makes a person revalue his faith in Christ. It is questions like this that make me more certain than ever that I want to major in biology and discover for myself the wonders of the world God has created for us."

"I don't think this would have very much bearing on my idea of God. Perhaps I would realize the greatness of God in a new dimension. Certainly learning new things has always given me a greater appreciation for God."

"Dr. Bishop: I have thoroughly enjoyed this course and your methods of teaching. Your deep concern for the preservation of faith in God, and truths in Biology, has inspired me."

"Ultimately belief in God is not a matter of scientific proof or data, but a matter of faith. Science is merely the investigation of a created order."

"I believe that God will allow it to happen because it is for the good of man. If man can create life, it would open new doors to science and perhaps this feat would aid man in finding a new way to increase the food supply for this fast-growing world."

"Maybe some people can logically argue God into a state of non-existence but I can't—nor can any honest man. There is something beyond biological origin that plays an important part in man, causing him to have a 'feeling' there is a God."

"I believe that when God gave man dominion over the earth he gave him license to investigate the entire universe as much as he can, and is able to. Therefore, it seems to me, it is not 'wrong' for man to try to reach the moon, put satellites into the sky, or even synthesize life. As man learns more about the universe and what makes it tick, he will bring praise and glory to the One who has designed it so beautifully."

GOSHEN'S SCIENCE FACULTY

DR. GLEN R. MILLER, chemistry
Dr. Miller received his Ph.D. from the State U. of Iowa in 1930, and has been on the Goshen faculty since 1925. He served as an MCC director in England in 1944-45 and as an Overseas Mission Associate of the MBMC in 1962-63.

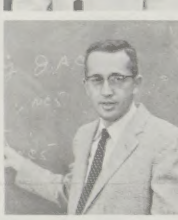
DR. PAUL BENDER, physics
Dr. Bender received his Ph.D. degree from the U. of Iowa in 1931 and has done additional graduate study at the U. of Chicago. He has been on the Goshen faculty since 1932. He has served the MCC in Europe, has served as acting dean of both Hesston and Goshen colleges and as registrar and director of admissions at Goshen College.

DR. H. CLAIR AMSTUTZ, biology
Dr. Amstutz received the M.D. degree from Indiana U. in 1938. He was medical director of LaPlata (Puerto Rico) Hospital from 1944-47, and practiced medicine in Goshen from 1947-1957. He has been on the Goshen faculty as student physician since 1939 and is now a full-time member of the faculty. He is the author of several books and articles, and Chairman of the Mennonite Mental Health Services, Inc.

DR. LESTER J. ZIMMERMAN, mathematics
Dr. Zimmerman received his Ph.D. degree from Purdue U. in 1956. He has been a member of the Goshen faculty since 1947. He received an NSF Fellowship for graduate study in mathematics during the 1960-61 school year.

DR. ARTHUR A. SMUCKER, chemistry
Dr. Smucker received a Ph.D. degree from the U. of Illinois in 1954. He joined the Goshen faculty in 1953. He has received two major research grants from the National Institutes of Health, and is currently engaged in research at the U. of California during his sabbatical leave. He served as a consultant to Miles Laboratories from 1959-1962. He has served in Europe under MCC in France and Holland.

DR. C. FRANKLIN BISHOP, biology
Dr. Bishop received his Ph.D. from West Virginia U. in 1948. He was an Extension Plant Pathologist and Entomologist at West Virginia U. until 1956 when he joined the Goshen faculty. He has served the MBMC in Nigeria as an Overseas Missions Associate.



DR. HENRY D. WEAVER, JR., Chemistry
Dr. Weaver received his Ph.D. degree from the U. of Delaware in 1953 and joined the Goshen faculty in 1957. He was President of the American Scientific Affiliation in 1962 and is a member of the Board of Directors of Mennonite Broadcasts, Inc. Dr. Weaver has conducted several research projects, one of them financed by a grant from the National Science Foundation.

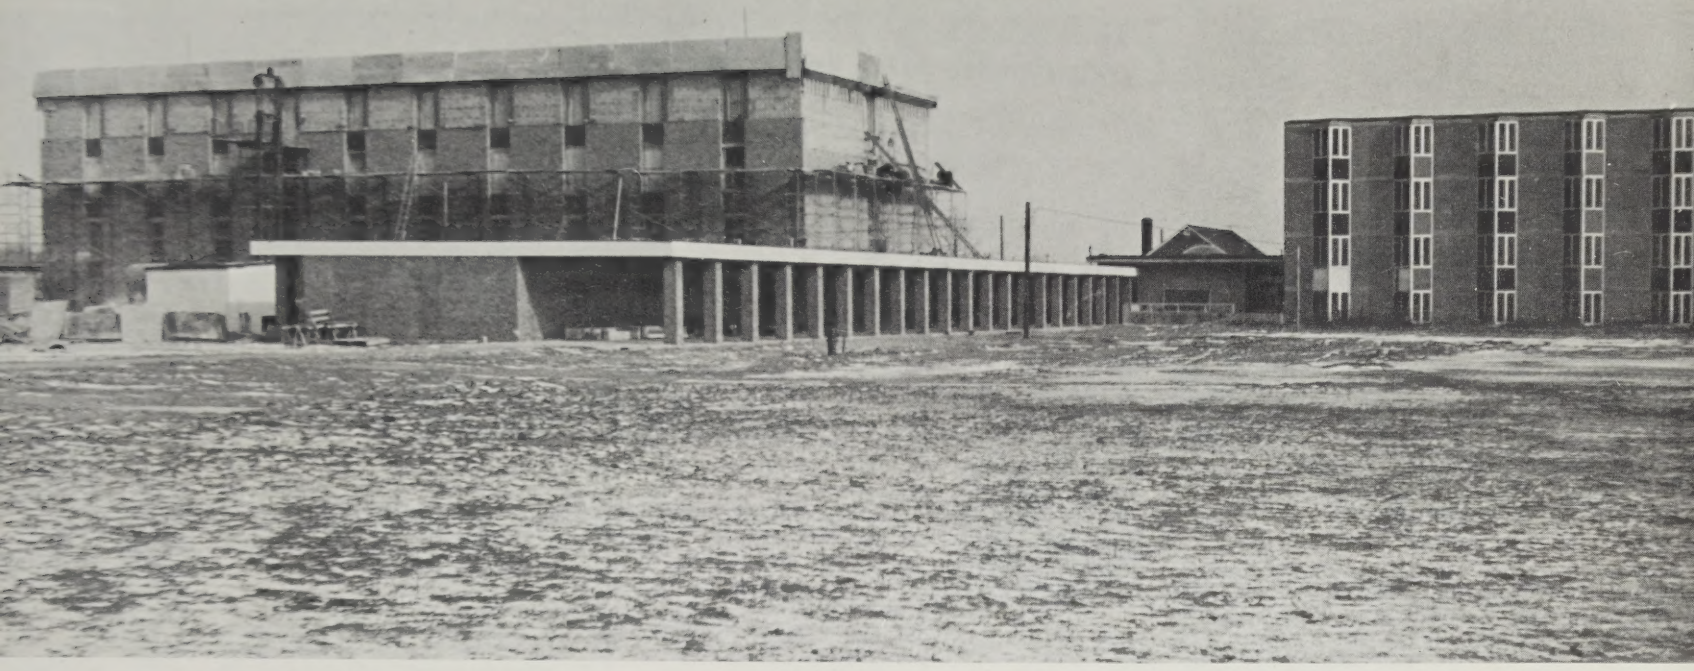
DR. MARTIN E. HOOVER, physics
Dr. Hoover received his Ph.D. in 1961 from the U. of California, where he was also a research associate and a lecturer in physics. He joined the Goshen faculty in 1961.

DR. JONATHAN N. ROTH, biology
Dr. Roth received the Ph.D. degree in 1962 from Oregon State U. He joined the Goshen faculty in 1962.

WILLIAM M. FREED, mathematics
Mr. Freed received the M.A. degree from the U. of Michigan in 1962 and has been a member of the Goshen faculty since that time.

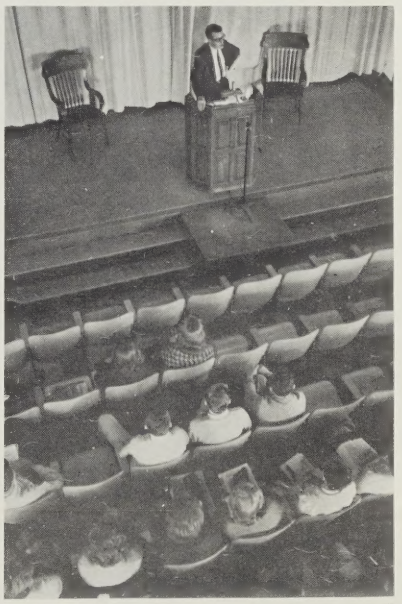
KRATZ HALL WALLS UP

Exterior walls on Goshen's new men's dormitory are now up and the brick facing is being applied. Plans call for the $500,000 structure to be completed for use next fall. It will house 100 men, and provide lounge and recreation facilities for Yoder Hall which adjoins it, as well as for the residents of the new facility.



ALUMNI ART EXHIBIT

The annual Homecoming season art exhibit was made up this year of works of art produced by eleven Goshen alumni who are now active artists. The sculpture in the foreground is the work of Paul Friesen, art instructor at Hesston College.



MANY LECTURERS VISIT CAMPUS

Each year a large number of outstanding scholars and artists from all parts of the world visit the Goshen campus to give public performances and lectures. Many of them appear on the Lecture-Music series, several more outstanding scholars appear each year on the Chapel-Lecture series, and the various special emphasis weeks throughout the year bring outstanding churchmen, such as Dr. Eugene Nida of the American Bible Society, to the campus. In addition, many other off-campus speakers address the student body during the regular morning chapel services.

The photo above was taken during the visit of Warren Kleiwer, a Christian poet and dramatist. Other visitors to the campus this year include: Dr. Eugene Nida, Dr. George A. Buttrick, Dr. Peter A. Bertocci, Edward Stoltzfus, John Ciardi, and the Robert Shaw Chorale.

ALUMNI FACULTY FUND NOW TOTALS $20,000

Contributions by Goshen's alumni to the Goshen College Alumni Association's new Alumni Faculty Fund have now passed the $20,000 mark. The Association executive committee has suggested that the Goshen alumni assume the entire cost of the faculty retirement and sabbatical leave programs for the current year. The goal of the fund is $76,000.

DR. OYER IN SCOTLAND

Dr. Mary K. Oyer, chairman of the music department, is spending the current school year in Edinburgh, Scotland, where she is studying under Dr. Erik Routley. Dr. Routley is a Congregational minister who has written books in the areas of both theology and church music. Dr. Oyer is a member of the General Conference committee which is presently working on a revision of the Mennonite church hymnal. She graduated from Goshen in 1945 and has been a member of the faculty since that time. She received the A. Mus. D. degree from the University of Michigan in 1957.

HOW TO GET YOUR NAME IN THE NEWSLETTER

Ever wonder why your name never appears in the Newsletter—especially when you see the name of some classmate who's doing the same sort of things you are?

The answer's really pretty simple, at least in most cases.

The difference usually is that the people you read about in the Newsletter (or their friends) keep us posted on what they're doing—and those you don't read about, don't.

The Newsletter does not, of course, maintain a large body of reporters to keep track of the Goshen alumni. Our only sources for Newsletter news are 1) clippings from the newspapers and magazines that we read, 2) reports from alumni—either about themselves or a fellow alumnus, and 3) releases from the PR departments of the organizations you work for.

Take the last issue of the Newsletter for instance. Two of the news stories came to us via organizational publicity departments, one of them was taken from a newspaper clipping (sent to us by an acquaintance of the alumnus involved), and another was the result of the advance publicity of a book publisher.

The items reported in "Newsletter Notes" come to us from a variety of sources: clippings from periodicals, tips from acquaintances, and notes from the persons themselves.

But we have no doubt that we're missing a lot of news that should be in the Newsletter—news that should be in because it is of interest to the only people who read the Alumni Newsletter, your former classmates.

So why not—as a favor to your friends and acquaintances from college years—put the Newsletter on the mailing list for your next birth announcement?

Why not let us know the next time you change jobs, or receive an advanced degree, or write a book, or climb a mountain, or anything else that would interest you if one of your college friends were involved instead of you?

Many of the Goshen alumni have already adopted this point of view. This, in fact, is the only thing that makes the publication of the Alumni Newsletter possible. But the Newsletter would be a lot more interesting to a lot more people if more of you would adopt this point of view.

How to get your name in the Newsletter? It's as easy as sending us a postcard!

Grads Appointed College President; Seminary Dean

During the month of January announcement was made of the appointment of two Goshen grads to important leadership positions in Mennonite higher education.

They were Myron S. Augsburger '59 and Ross T. Bender '54. Augsburger was appointed president of Eastern Mennonite College, Harrisburg, Va. effective June, 1966. Bender was appointed Dean of the Goshen College Biblical Seminary effective July 1, 1964.

AUGSBURGER

Augsburger received a B.D. degree from the Seminary in 1959. Since then he has received the Th.M. degree from Union Theological Seminary and is a candidate for the Th.D. degree from that school this spring. He is widely known as an author and evangelist, having published four books and led in over fifty community-wide evangelistic campaigns in the United States and abroad.

Bender received a B.A. degree from Goshen College in 1954, and B.D. and M.R.E. degrees from the Seminary in 1956. He received a Ph.D. degree from Yale Univ. in 1962, where his major field of study was Christian education. He served as principal of Rockway Mennonite High School 1956-60, and as associate pastor of the Erb St. Mennonite Church, Waterloo, Ont. from 1958-60. He is chairman of the Menn. Commission for Christian Education. Mrs. Bender is the former Ruth Steinmann '55. Bender is not a relative of the former Dean, the late Harold S. Bender.

BENDER

Both Bender and Augsburger are 34 years old.

Grad Elected MSA President

Clarence A. Fulmer '22 was elected president of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools on December 5, 1963. He is principal of the Wilmington, Delaware High School.

The Middle States Association is one of six regional accrediting associations in the United States, corresponding to the North Central Association in the Goshen area. It includes the states of Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, and Pennsylvania; and Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia. Fulmer had served on the executive committee of the Association since 1959.

Mrs. Fulmer is the former Eunice Guth '24. They are the parents of one son.

Fulmer received an M.A. degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1926. His career in Wilmington High School began in 1925 when he went there as a teacher of social studies. He became principal in 1935.

Mr. Fulmer is listed in "Who's Who in America". He has held numerous civic positions, and currently serves as co-chairman of a bi-racial committee in the Greater Wilmington area. He has held positions on the local, area, and national YMCA boards, and is currently president of the Wilmington and New Castle Co. YMCA. He was named "Man of the Year" by the Delaware Chamber of Commerce in 1960.

Alumni Lead In MCC Racial Effort

The leadership which Goshen grads are furnishing in the current efforts of the MCC Peace Section to work in areas of racial tension, was highlighted at the recent annual meeting of the organization in Chicago, Jan. 16.

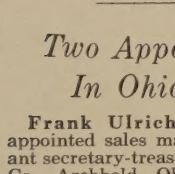
The executive secretary of the Peace section is Edgar Metzler '53 (and B.D. '61). Other participants on the program were Dr. C. Norman Kraus '51 and Vincent Harding. Mrs. Harding is the former Rosemary Freeney '55.

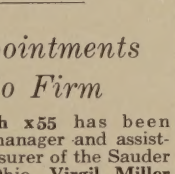
"Nonresistance as a distinctly Christian doctrine can be defined only as redemptive involvement in a sinful world," said Kraus. Dr. Kraus spent the past summer in Atlanta, working with Vincent and Rosemary Harding in the area of race relations.

Dr. John Howard Yoder '47 is a member of the executive committee of the Peace Section. Other alumni serve the Peace Section throughout the world as peace representatives of MCC. Metzler will make a trip to India in late 1964 on an assignment of this type.

Two Appointments In Ohio Firm

Frank Ulrich x55 has been appointed sales manager and assistant secretary-treasurer of the Sauder Co., Archbold, Ohio. Virgil Miller x63 has been appointed Ohio sales representative for the same firm.





Canadians Visit Cuba on MCC Mission

Two Canadian alumni visited the island of Cuba immediately following Hurricane Flora in October, 1963. They were Harvey Taves '51, director of MCC in Canada; and Elvin Snyder '27, a missionary to Puerto Rico.

As representatives of the Mennonite Central Committee they went to offer clothes, food, and personnel to hurricane-stricken peoples of the two eastern provinces of the island. As Canadian citizens the two men had no difficulty in traveling to Cuba.

As a result of the trip, the MCC office in Kitchener, Ont. will provide medicines to people who are unable to obtain what they need in Cuba.

Educator Promoted In Indiana

Clemens Hallman '59, who has been State Supervisor for Foreign Languages in the Indiana State Dept. of Public Instruction for the past two years, was recently appointed Director of the Division of Science, Mathematics and Foreign Languages. In addition he teaches a course in methods of teaching foreign language at Indiana U. and Indiana State College. His wife is the former Kitty High '55.

Banker Takes Position in Arizona

Don Kreider '38 has resigned his position as Executive Vice-president of Sears Bank and Trust Co. of Chicago to accept a position with the Guaranty Bank of Phoenix, Arizona, effective February 1. He is Vice-president in charge of the Downtown Home Office. Mrs. Kreider is the former Elda Hostetler '37.

CLASS OF 1954:

The class of 1954 is of course, larger than most of the earlier classes we have featured, but it also reflects the growing number of Goshen alumni who are moving into less common occupational fields. In addition to the usual number of doctors (4); teachers (33); housewives (24); nurses (7); and ministers (12, plus 4 who are wives of ministers), the class includes several people who are engaged in more unusual occupational activities.

The class reflects a wide geographical distribution ranging from Brownsville, Texas to College, Alaska and from LaPlata, Puerto Rico to Spokane. Washington. The class also includes 12 foreign alumni (see story below).

Among members of the class engaged in less common educational pursuits: Andrew N. K. Chang, who is a statistician; Lewis Hartman, who is Executive Director of the Multiple Sclerosis Assn. of Washington, D.C.; Kenneth M. Horst, who is an engineer for the Atomic Power Equipment Dept. of General Electric, participating in a project which is working on the development of nuclear reactors for use in generating electricity; Eunice A. (Zook) Little, who is a county extension agent in home economics (the only Goshen grad currently engaged in this occupation. she says); Virgil Mumaw, who is director of the Electron Microscope Lab. at Western Reserve University; Wilfred C. Rudy, who is in charge of a pictorial reference library for set, graphic, and costume designers in the television division of CBC; and Virgil Yoder, who is a hospital radiation physicist.

In addition, the class of '54 includes one of the few politically active Goshen alumni. Rita (Clemens) Smoker is chairman of the Raton Republican Womens group and in addition, a member of the New Mexico State Central Committee.

We sent inquiries to 165 members of the class of '54 and received replies from 110 of them, a 67% response.

TWELVE FROM CLASS OF '54 OVERSEAS

Twelve members of the class of 1954 now live overseas according to our records and are not included in the mailing, due to the difficulty in mail service to overseas locations.

1964's FIRST ALUMNI REUNION

Probably the first alumni reunion of the new year was held in West Berlin, with three alumni present. Alan Kreider '62, Barbel Ewert x63, and Dr. Wolfgang Schultz x55 sent us a postcard dated January 1, 1964, 12:40 a.m. (7:40 p.m., December 31, 1963 in Goshen) claiming the distinction of the first alumni reunion of 1964. GOSHEN COLLEGE

MARCH 1964

Bender Dean of Goshen-Elkhart Seminaries

Dr. Ross T. Bender, who was appointed Dean of the Goshen College Biblical Seminary on January 25 by the Board of Overseers, was also appointed academic Dean of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary, Elkhart, Indiana on March 5, by the Board of Trustees of that institution.

As the Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries, the two schools have offered a joint program of studies since MBS was moved to Elkhart in 1958. As dean of the two schools Bender will be able to coordinate this expanding program more efficiently. Under the plan the two schools will retain complete autonomy, but will be under the academic leadership of a single person who will serve as dean at both seminaries.

The Goshen College Biblical Seminary has been without a dean since the death of former Dean Harold S. Bender on September 21, 1962. In the interim period Pres. Paul Mininger has served as acting dean, and Ross Bender as assistant to the dean. Harold S. Bender served as the dean of the seminary from its beginnings in 1933 until his death. The former dean and the new dean are not relatives.

Mennonite Biblical Seminary is the direct descendant of the earliest Mennonite effort in seminary education, the Mennonite Seminary, which was founded by the General Conference Mennonite Church in 1914 as a department of Bluffton College. The Mennonite Biblical Seminary was founded in 1945 and was located in Chicago, Illinois until it was relocated in a new set of buildings at Elkhart in 1958.

When MBS moved to Elkhart in 1958, an association was formed with the Goshen College Biblical Seminary which was called the Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries. The purposes of this association are to provide for sharing library resources between the two schools, to sponsor a program of research activities under the Institute of Mennonite Studies, and to share teaching resources through a program of joint instruction.

In recent years the program of joint instruction has proven especially valuable. Under this program students of both seminaries take some of their elective courses at the other seminary. This has eliminated a great deal of duplicated effort and has freed the faculty of both schools for other work.

The suggestion was made late in 1962 that the jointly operated program of instruction could be more efficiently directed by a single person, rather than by two separate deans. Administrators and board members of both seminaries began to study this proposal very carefully at this time.

During the next year wide consultation was taken throughout the church, in regard both to the new dean of the Goshen Seminary, and the question of sharing a dean with the Elkhart Seminary. The final decision on both these matters was made by the Goshen College Board of Overseers and the Mennonite Board of Education only after a period of long and intense deliberation.

Ross T. Bender came to the Seminary in 1962 as Assistant Professor of Christian Education and Assistant to the Dean. He had previously served from 1956 to 1960 as principal of Rockway Mennonite High School, Kitchener, Ontario. He is an ordained minister, and served as associate pastor of the Erb Street Mennonite Church, Waterloo, Ontario from 1958 to 1960. He is the chairman of the Mennonite Commission for Christian Education, and a former member of the Mennonite Board of Education and the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities.

Bender received the Ph.D. degree from Yale University in 1962, where his major field was Christian Education. He received a B.A. degree from Goshen College in 1954, and B.D. and M.R.E. degrees from the Goshen College Biblical Seminary in 1956.

Dean-elect Ross T. Bender

New Step Ahead in an Old Program

The appointment of Dr. Bender as Dean of the Goshen College Biblical Seminary and academic Dean of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary will significantly facilitate the program of cooperation between the two schools which began when the MBS moved to Elkhart from its former location in Chicago.

Since the program began in 1958 with the formation of the Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries there has been a steady process of increasing cooperation between the two schools. Says Dean-elect Bender: "The program began on a very limited basis—2 afternoons a week at Elkhart with only elective courses offered. Now we are to the point where the joint program of classes is bulging at the seams. Two full days can hardly contain it. We may have to go to three days next year. Required courses are now being taught on a conjoint basis, and the electives increasingly are being left for the separate programs."

The faculties of both seminaries are currently engaged in a joint curriculum study entitled Renewal and Curriculum. The study is an attempt to determine ways in which the seminaries can participate in the task of church renewal. Later an attempt will be made to evaluate the course offerings of the schools in light of the present study.

Efforts are also being made to find ways in which the cooperative program can be made more effective. Bender says of developments in this area: "The joint curriculum committee is making a recommendation that we have what we call 'The Common Campus Curriculum'. These courses would basically include lecture courses and would be offered on either the Goshen or Elkhart campus. Then on the remaining days of the week, the professors would offer the rest of their courses—primarily electives.

"This would mean that whereas we do have some duplication in our course work now, this would be minimized, and we could expand and enrich our offerings."

"The faculties have the proposal under review now. Of course, there are some problems connected with it and it may not be adopted—at least not in its present form."

What does the appointment of a single person as academic dean at both schools mean in the future of the relationship bewteen the two seminaries? Dean-elect Bender says it this way: "One of the students asked me recently if there is a master plan for uniting the two seminaries into one and I said 'no, there is not a master plan'. None of us has thought far enough ahead to have worked out a plan to deliberately work toward. But we are all aware of a strategy larger than that of our own at work.

"In other words, we feel a sense of destiny with which we are living. We feel that it is the Lord who is leading us and bringing us together—and so we just go from stage to stage. And this stage represents yet another one.

What lies beyond this step, one could surmise, but there is no way of knowing at this time what it will be. I'm much more comfortable living without a master strategy, and simply assessing the present situation and maximizing it—which in itself creates new conditions."

Although obviously optimistic about the opportunities in the newly created position, Bender is not unaware of its problems. "But," he says, "I think this plan can work in this situation because there is a will all around to make it work. This is expressed in both faculties, both administrations, in both boards, and in the student bodies. And where there is a will to make it work, where you have people who are compatible and eager to move along, I think it can work, under the leading of the Lord."

A New Dean Looks Ahead

Dean-elect of the Seminary, Dr. Ross T. Bender talks informally and openly about the issues which the seminary faces as it looks to the future under a new dean. The quotations below are edited exerpts from a lengthy tape-recorded interview held in Dr. Bender's office last month.

THE GROWTH OF THE SEMINARY

"I think the way in which the Seminary has been accepted by our church is simply amazing. We started from scratch. We did not have a tradition of an educated ministry—but of a lay ministry, in the sense of an untrained ministry. I don't think I can really imagine how radical the idea of a seminary must have been back there when it was first suggested. During the brief time the seminary's been in existence it has 'won its spurs', I think. Not that there isn't still apprehension and misgiving about the idea of a seminary, but I think its 'in'. I mean by that it has won its way, that its an accepted part of our church now.

"People in the churches are increasingly talking about 'our seminary'. That's a very simple thing, but it is also a very profound thing in terms of people's attitudes. I think the seminary has made a real contribution to the progress of our church in the recent past. Its graduates are sought for leadership positions—the decision-making positions—in the churches and in our church institutions. Not every congregation that calls for a minister calls for a seminary graduate by any means, but an increasing number do. Churches that you wouldn't expect to come to the seminary are coming and saying 'is there anybody here that we might consider for our pastor?' And every year there are more churches that come than there are graduates. That I think is significant, and I anticipate that it will continue."

THE PROPHETIC TASK OF THE SEMINARY

"I have no illusions that this is the only place where direction is being charted for the Mennonite Church and where leadership is developing. There are a number of settings where this kind of thing is happening. I do think that we need to accept the fact that we have been called to provide some leadership —along with other groups. So the question really is, what are the distinctive aspects of our particular setting for working at this larger task?

"I feel that part of our calling is to stand outside of the active things that are going on in the church so that we can perform a function of reflective evaluation—in other words prophecy. We are specifically set aside to take a prophetic stance, and naturally the prophet—if he is a true prophet—must at times stand alone. Nevertheless we also stand within the church, in that it is the church itself which has called us and appointed us. We're not self-appointed prophets. You don't give leadership unless you are also within the group that you're leading. You are not leading if no one is following. So, while we are withdrawn we are also very much involved in the life of the church. We do not take our stance outside the church but we do stand, in a sense, apart from its more active expressions. Rather than the doing, our part is more the thinking. But we also participate in the doing.

"We do have to be careful that the difference I spoke of is not one of pride of place. In other words we dare not feel that we at the seminary are superior and ought not to associate with the average layman out in the church. That's a very sinful kind of thing and it represents a subtle snare in our vocation. But there is a certain distinction which arises simply because we're involved in different kinds of things. Our interests are the same but different. In other words we're all interested in the church and its mission, but we're interested at different levels."

THE CHURCH IN A CHANGING WORLD

"One person at a meeting from which I just returned was responding to the idea that we're in a period of rapid social change, and he commented that this has always been true. He even suggested humorously that Eve said to Adam as they left the Garden of Eden, 'Adam, I think we're about to enter a period of rapid social change'! It's been true ever since then. But there have been startling developments recently. All the observers of the human scene are noting these, and of course, we can witness them ourselves. This presents us with large social and ethical and religious questions relating to what the church is here for—what it is all about—and what its message should be in terms that are relevant to the dynamic situation of a world that just won't hold still.

"For the church to work in this kind of situation takes training of the first order. Really we are living in a revolution, and it's an illusion to continue to think that we are living in an isolated, rural context—that things that go on elsewhere in the world don't touch us and that we don't really have to worry about them. To think that we can just concentrate on the Bible and preaching and teaching—apart from any relationship to the situation in which people live—is erroneous."

THE PROBLEM OF STUDENT RECRUITMENT

"I see the responsibility for recruitment laying not basically with us—so that it is our job to go and beat the bushes to find servants for the Lord—but with each congregation.

"I know that the image of the ministry, as our young men see it, has a great influence upon whether or not they decide to go to seminary. Usually it is the influence of some person upon a young man—many times a minister—which determines whether or not he will go to seminary and into the ministry. There was a study made three or four years ago in which the ministerial students in five denominations were studied, attempting to assess the influences that led these young men to seminary. One of these groups was the student body at Goshen and Elkhart Seminaries. In the other four seminaries, the image of the ministry as these young men had observed it in their ministers, was very high as an influence in their deciding to go to Seminary. In the case of the Mennonite boys, both Elkhart and Goshen, it was near the bottom as an influence. My conclusion, as I reflect upon this, is that apparently the image of the ministry is very low in our denomination.

"We are in transition from a situation where ministers were not salaried at all, into one where their support is increasing. And along with tangible financial support comes other kinds of regard for the ministry so that I see this situation as improving. Of course there are dangers along this road, and I recognize them full well. The danger is that the ministry simply becomes an opportunity for projecting my ego. I don't think our church will ever go to the extent where the ministry is really the road to popularity and success. But I do think there has to be enough regard for the ministry so that a man can at least lift up his head and look the world in the face, and respect himself for what he is doing."

THE NEED FOR CREATIVITY

"I am not interested in developing a particular program that we think can be adopted church-wide, so that every man who goes out of here knows what it is and can put it into effect. What I am concerned with is some creativity and flexibility—some attempts to try something creative which may work in one community, though not necessarily in another.

"I think the seminary should attempt some 'pilot experiments' in areas of pressing human need. I think for example of Oaklawn Psychiatric Center in Elkhart as a prime example of an opportunity for us to get to work. I think of industry as another example.

"We also need to develop some insights which will help us understand what it means for a rural church to become an urban church. Melvin Gingerich's research is now documenting a hunch that a number of us have had for a long time, and that is that the Mennonite church is becoming increasingly an urban church. This is primarily true in the East. Further west it is more rural.

"But what does it mean to make this kind of a transition? We don't know yet because we are simply a rural people living in non-rural settings. The next generation is going to be different: it's going to be urban in non-rural settings. What will that kind of mind-set mean? We don't know, but I think that if we were really concerned to know, we might be able to anticipate what it would mean—and we might even be able to give some direction to it, so that we aren't simply absorbed. This is a little different kind of research, but I think that it is a pretty vital area."

THE SEMINARY'S FINANCES

I think the church will come to see that if the seminary has a right to exist, that it ought to be supported as a separate enterprise—over and above collegiate education. This means that the Seminary has to carry its own weight a little more than it has in the past. It takes money to operate a small program and I think our program will continue to be a relatively small program because we are a relatively small denomination.

"This by the way is another reason for our cooperation with the Elkhart Seminary. There are real savings involved in our sharing of resources. Another way we might put it is that—for the same amount of money—we can significantly enrich our resources by pooling them!"

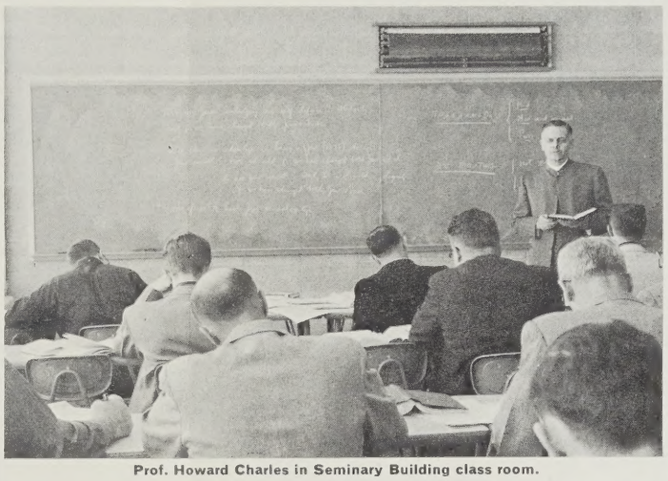
Goshen's 70 Year Tradition of Biblical Studies

Meeting the Church's Need for Intensive Bible Study

From its Elkhart beginning in 1894, ministers, missionaries and laymen have studied the Bible at Goshen College. Over the years its faculty has built up a large, varied offering. In a striking way the growth of the Mennonite Church's overseas missions parallels the high points of Goshen's Bible emphasis.

When Elkhart Institute became Goshen College in 1903, the Bible tradition became stronger. At first it offered two years of English Bible, but not on the college level. By 1910 a Bible School was one of its seven departments; it offered two two-year courses—one for elementary school graduates, one for high school graduates.

When J. E. Hartzler was elected Bible School Dean in December 1911, he went



Prof. Howard Charles in Seminary Building class room.

Bible Studies Begin in 1894

In 1894, five years before the first Mennonite missionaries left North America, the Elkhart Institute of Science, Industry and the Arts offered Bible courses. In 1900 it offered its first Short Bible Course, four weeks long. Later known as Winter Bible Term, church workers used this opportunity for intensive study when they could not leave home for a more extended period.

Interest ran high. Principal N. E. Byers told the Board of Directors in 1901 that there is a "demand for a stronger course which would include the study of the Bible in the original languages of Greek and Hebrew".

on record as the first to suggest a course leading to the B.D. degree. This, however, did not become a reality until 35 years later.

After World War I the Bible School again attracted large numbers. Men were returning from reconstruction projects or VS. The church was emphasizing evangelism and religious education. Plans called for three teachers—one each for the Old and New Testaments, and one for the practical, historical, and educational courses. College officials hoped this would become the first year of a regular seminary, but this did not happen for 14 more years. In 1922 the Board of Education recommended "to provide for the founding of an institute in connection with this central college which would offer graduate work in Bible."

A Seminary Begins To Evolve

In 1931 Harold S. Bender became Dean of the Bible School. Until his death in 1962, he built this undergraduate Bible School into the Mennonite Church's first graduate-level seminary.

In 1933, under Dean Bender's direction, the faculty was offering a one-year graduate course, equivalent to a regular first year seminary's work. In addition the Bible School was offering a college major in Bible, a Th.B. course, a two-year Christian Worker's course, and a one-year training course for Sunday School teachers. In 1934 the first Th.B. students graduated—two men and two women.

In 1941 the Th.B. course was expanded to three years. Students could now receive the equivalent of a seminary course in five years, two of those in liberal arts study.

The Bible School kept growing; 23 were enrolled in the Th.B. program in 1942.

In 1946 when the Board of Education authorized the Bible School to become "The Goshen College Biblical Seminary", it introduced the B.D. program, a three year graduate-level course. In 1947 the Seminary granted its first five B.D. degrees.

The Seminary—
A Leader in the Church

Under H. S. Bender's leadership, historical research has helped rediscover the Anabaptist conception of the Church.

In 1958, twelve years after the Seminary was founded, it received full accreditation by the American Association of Theological Schools. This means that it is one of the best possible training institutions of its type. Accreditation is granted by AATS to schools which operate at a postgraduate level and which require high academic achievement. Adequate instruction must also be available in four areas—Biblical, historical, theological, and practical studies. In addition, the school must have at least six full time professors, students must enter into the life of the school, there must be sufficient income to maintain its program, and the library must have adequate physical facilities as well as sufficient funds for books and the binding of periodicals.

The question of a building for the Seminary, then crowded into the College's Administration Building, arose in 1947. As early as 1917, Pres. J. E. Hartzler had acquired title to a plot of land for a Seminary Building, but it was not until 1951 that the Board of Education authorized the erection of such a building.

In 1960 the Seminary Building was dedicated. Built for a capacity of 150 students (triple the present enrollment), and including classrooms, offices, library, research facilities, a lounge and a chapel, the building cost $250,000.

The Associated Mennonite Seminaries

In 1956 when the General Conference Mennonites were planning their move from Chicago to Elkhart, men from both campuses were beginning to work on a plan of cooperation. On September 16, 1958, the two schools inaugurated their conjoint course work, beginning the cooperative relationship known as "The Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries".

This arrangement is "conducted with full mutual and brotherly respect for differences in doctrine, policy, practice, or tradition . . . but there shall be full freedom of teaching and witnessing by each school to the faith and position of its own group," accroding to the Memorandum of Agreement.

Besides joint course offerings, the libraries of the seminaries are coordinated. Students occasionally hold joint meetings for fellowship and study. The seminaries' Institute of Mennonite Studies promote and administer studies in fields of direct interest to the Church's faith, and witness. Now, after 5½ years' experience, the Associated Seminaries have taken another step—the appointment of an academic dean to serve both schools. Ross Bender, who will serve in this capacity, will still carry the administrative responsibilities at the Goshen Seminary.

THE SEMINARY FACULTY

The major resource of the Seminary is the skill, training, and motivation of its faculty. Very few seminaries of comparable size have been able to secure faculty members of a quality equal to that of the Goshen College Biblical Seminary.

Dr. Ross T. Bender, Dean
Dean Bender was named to succeed the late Dean Harold S. Bender (not a relative) effective July 1964. Before coming to the seminary in 1962, he had served for five years as principal of Rockway Mennonite High School. He was ordained in 1958 and served as associate pastor of the Erb Street Mennonite Church from 1959 through 1960. He graduated from Goshen College in 1955 and from the seminary in 1956. He has received the Ph.D. degree from Yale University. His area of study is Christian Education.

Dr. John C. Wenger, Theology
Widely known throughout the church for his books and articles and for his leadership in conference and church board activities, Dr. Wenger is the senior member of the seminary faculty. He graduated from Goshen College in 1934 and later received his Th.D. degree from the University of Zurich (Switzerland) in 1938. He has been a member of the seminary faculty since 1938 and has served on all of the major church boards and as moderator of Mennonite General Conference. He was ordained in 1944 and ordained bishop in 1951.

Dr. Howard H. Charles, New Testament
Professor Charles has served on the faculty of the seminary since 1947. He graduated from Goshen College in 1941 and received a B.D. degree from Union Theological Seminary in 1944, and the Th.M. degree from Princeton Theological Seminary in 1948. In 1958 he received the Ph.D. degree from the University of Edinburgh. He was ordained in 1943.

Dr. Millard C. Lind, Old Testament
Dr. Lind came to the seminary in 1959 after completing the residence requirements for his doctoral degree at Pittsburgh Theological Seminary. He had previously served as editor of Christian Living Magazine, and as an editor of Sunday School curriculum materials at the Mennonite Publishing House. He has also served as a pastor, and was ordained in 1944.

Dr. Paul M. Miller, Practical Theology
Dr. Miller directs the program of practical work of the seminary, in which each student is required to supplement his academic study with work in a local church. Before coming to Goshen College as a student, Miller was a farmer in the Bainbridge, Pennsylvania area. He graduated from Goshen College in 1949 and from the seminary in 1952. He received Th.M. and Th.D. degrees from the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. He has served on many boards and committees of the church and is an active bishop. He was ordained in 1947 and ordained bishop in 1951.

Dr. John H. Yoder, Theology
Dr. Yoder graduated from Goshen College in 1947 and received his Dr. Theol. degree from the University of Basel in 1962. He served as administrative assistant in foreign missions at the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities from 1958 to 1964. He has also served the Mennonite Central Committee in France and Algeria.

J. D. Graber, Missions
A long-time leader in the missions program of the Mennonite Church, J. D. Graber brings important experience to his part-time teaching responsibilities at the seminary. He graduated from Goshen College in 1925 and served as a missionary in India from that time until 1942. In 1944 he became executive secretary of the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities and is presently secretary of foreign missions at MBMC. He has been assistant professor of missions since 1957. He was ordained in 1925 and ordained bishop in 1939.

Dr. S. C. Yoder, Bible
As president of Goshen College during the years when the seminary had its beginning, Dr. S. C. Yoder's contribution to it is very great. After his retirement from the presidency in 1940 he served as professor of Bible in the Seminary until his retirement in 1962. He received a B.D. degree and an honorary D.D. degree from Northern Baptist Theological Seminary. He earned the S.T.D. degree from Gordon Divinity School. He was ordained in 1911 and ordained bishop in 1913. He is currently listed as professor emeritus of Bible.

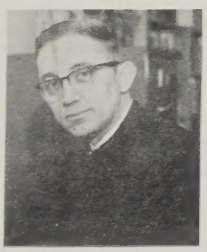
2 Professors Win Grants

GINGERICH



BAUMAN

Dr. Roman Gingerich, chairman of the department of physical education, and Pastor to Students Harold E. Bauman were recently awarded important grants. Dr. Gingerich received a Fulbright Grant to teach physical education at Chulalanghorn University in Bangkok, Thailand during the coming school year. His wife and three of his children will accompany him to Thailand for the year.

Pastor Bauman has received a Danforth Campus Ministry Grant from the Danforth Foundation of St. Louis which will provide for a full year of graduate study in the area of the relationship between religion and higher education. He was one of twenty recipients of similar grants.

Both Gingerich and Bauman are graduates of Goshen College. Gingerich has been a member of the faculty since 1941, and Bauman since 1958.

Heating Plant To Be Expanded

A major expansion of the campus' central heating plant to provide additional heating capacity in the new Kratz Residence Hall, is scheduled to begin in late spring. The present system, which provides steam heat for the entire campus, was built in 1945 and a steady expansion of the campus since then has seriously overtaxed it. The present boiler system has been operated at 150% of intended capacity since the completion of Yoder Hall in 1960, resulting in a serious smoke and residue problem throughout the campus.

The new heating plant will include interior coal and ash storage and a new automatic-operation boiler unit. The plant itself will be enlarged and the exterior will be completely new. The present boiler system will be retained as reserve equipment, and the present smokestack will be used. The cost of the project is estimated at $120,000 to $135,000 by Business Manager Ralph Gunden.

Ministers School Offered By Seminary

Twenty-five Mennonite Ministers from Quebec, Iowa, Indiana, Michigan and Ohio attended the 13th annual School for Ministers at the Seminary. Paul Erb (photo above) was guest lecturer for the school.

What Happens At Goshen? The Class of 64 Answers:

"You are different people in many ways, from what you were four years ago when you came to Goshen College. What are the most important ways in which you have changed?"

This question was put to two groups of graduating seniors last month, and their unedited answere are, in part, printed below.

The fifteen participants in the round-table discussions were chosen as an approximate cross-section of the entire class. They came from all parts of the nation, and all areas of the Mennonite Church, and represent a wide diversity of academic interests. Factual information about the students is included with their photographs, on the inside pages.

The students' answers to this question might be summed up something like this: "Our outlooks were broadened; we learned the importance of becoming real persons; we learned a new appreciation for the Church; our primary goal has become service rather than a particular occupation; and we have discovered that true religion gives meaning to life." One student summed it all up as a "centering down."

Here is what the students actually said.

"Our Outlooks Were Broadened . . ."

"I think my outlook has been broadened — it's more universal. I've become more sure of myself — I know more about myself and understand myself better," said one of the girls in the group and her statement was typical.

The students did not attribute this primarily to their classwork. Said one math major, "I think it could have been course work, but perhaps more than that it's meeting people on campus that are not Mennonites from rural backgrounds — and not particularly between the ages of seventeen and twenty-one."

Another said, "I always wanted to assume that the world could be made into a neat pattern. I think my provincialism was destroyed when I finally realized — and I can't say that I fully have yet — but I have come to realize more and more the complexity of situations and the finiteness of men, and myself in particular."

Several students expressed some apprehension about fitting back into their home communities after their broadening experience at Goshen. One student said, "I know I have ideas about going somewhere else, but my conscience sort of bothers me about not going back to my home church where people are maybe farmers and things like this. Maybe it would be better to work in our home communities, and develop there first."

An interesting contrast to this was provided by an African student in the group who said, "I don't think I'm faced with this problem though, of trying to relate myself to my home community. I don't think it is as serious as it is here. We don't have this element of some conservative people thinking that the educated people are doing the wrong thing. We have never had this clash."

Becoming Real Persons . . .

"When I think of my education, I think a lot of it I got in the dormitories," said one student. Others echoed her comment. "I think I changed somewhat from being too much to myself to being able to establish social relationships. I think the dorm experience has contributed a lot to that, as well as the general emphasis to learn to know other persons," said one.

Another said, "I think Goshen has helped me to open up to people, and to really see what other people are like and to open myself up to them. In a much deeper way than I was ever able to before I think I can form deeper relations with people because of the interaction I've had here. And also some of the psychology courses, and this kind of thing."

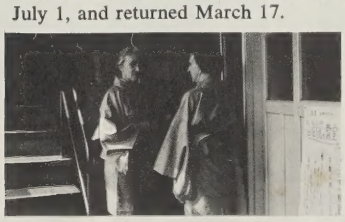
Two students said that "Goshen College has helped me to look at life more realistically." One of them explained it this way: "I think that each of us have a lot of qualities — at least I do myself — that I don't particularly like and so one of the first things a person tries to do is cover them up. And I found out in the last four years that this can go just so far and then you find out that it really doesn't work. People really can see right through you quite often, and this comes as quite a shock when you first realize it. And it's kind of a fearful thing. But I think to live realistically and objectively you have to face yourself, and I think that in the last four years this has happened to me. I don't know exactly where I've come since then, but I think it's something that should happen in a person's life."

Orpah Mosemann Returns from 'International' Sabbatical

Orpah Mosemann was no tourist on her 8½ month around-the-world trip; she visited more than 30 government and mission hospitals, 15 schools of nursing, did surveys for two hospitals and two schools of nursing, and taught seven weeks at the Mid-India Board Graduate School for Nurses. She left last July 1, and returned March 17.



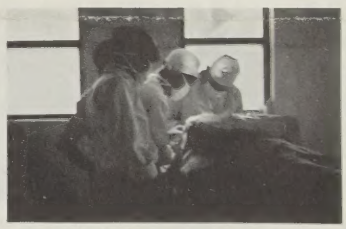
Miss Mosemann visited the Ressler sisters, Japan, dressed in kimonos.

Miss Mosemann made the trip during her sabbatical, a leave of absence for travel or research granted to Goshen College faculty every eighth year after the first ten. Her trip was underwritten by the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities under which some 220 missionaries serve on fifteen overseas fields. The Board granted Miss Mosemann the privilege to visit hospitals and personnel under Mennonite Central Committee, the official relief and service agency for North American Mennonites, and the Eastern Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities, under which some 160 missionaries serve on eight fields.

VIETNAM — SADNESS, CONTRAST

Reporting on her trip, Miss Mosemann said one of the saddest things she saw was at the Government School of Nursing in Saigon, Vietnam. She said, "The school had a very large reading room with many shelves, but only a few books. None of the few books were written in Vietnamese; they were all in English."

In contrast to North American standards, the Chan-Y-Vien-Tin-Lanh ("the charity institution of good news") clinic in Vietnam, one of several where Dr. Carl and Phyllis Yoder serve, has 19 beds in a communal ward—men, women and children. Miss Mosemann said, "No one seems to mind — not even the doctors and nurses, so the visitor tried not to mind either."



Dr. Carl Yoder does eye surgery in a clinic at Nhatrang, Vietnam.

TEACHING IN INDIA

At the Mid-India Board's Graduate School at Indore, Miss Mosemann taught classes to students majoring in nursing administration. But the students, similar in standing to American nursing instructors and supervisors, had begun their studies three months earlier and had covered principles of administration, much of what she had prepared to teach. Miss Mosemann found herself teaching business administration and hospital budgets, and said, "I was least prepared for this.

"But it was an interesting experience. Language at times became a problem, since the medium of instruction is Hindi. However, all of the students could read and understand English.

"On several occasions I found myself listening to a heated class discussion and not knowing what they were saying. But someone always came to my rescue.

"This was one of the highlights of my trip. It gave me opportunity to meet India's future nursing leaders. I shall long remember their warm, friendly farewell at the railroad station in Indore. I forget how many garlands were on my neck. And they gave me a pen holder with a hand-carved sandalwood elephant on it."

SERVED AT DHAMTARI HOSPITAL

From Indore Miss Mosemann went to Dhamtari Christian Hospital.

A New Appreciation for the Church . . .

The change of attitudes among the group in regard to the church is characterized by this statement: "I think I've changed my opinion of the Mennonite church itself. It's not a church that says you should not do this, but a church that has some positive things to say to the world, and I feel that I want to remain a Mennonite, because of the doctrines it has."

Another said, "The community that I come from is quite ingrown. The nearest Mennonite church is 60 miles away and you think of the church and of the Mennonite Church as being our little group. Coming to school and meeting people not only from all parts of the United States who are Mennonites, but all those who are not Mennonites and all those from foreign countries, I've seen a much broader picture of the Mennonite church."

Two students spoke of their tradition. "I have to think over and over again of the background that I have, in the persons of my parents and grandparents. This type of thing, although I don't see them as I used to, but yet it gives you a real — not a sense of security — but it really gives you a sense of responsibility to do something also to carry on what has been so finely entrusted to us."

"I go along with that," added another student. "In high school I used to be ashamed of the Mennonite church and I'm certainly not any more. And I know it's because of Goshen College."

From Occupation to Service . . .

Almost all the panel members mentioned the idea of "service" somewhere in their comments. One student described this as "going into any occupation with the feeling that you are not doing it just for the money that comes out of it, but for some sense of trying to give some service to the persons around you."

What most of the students noted was that their entire attitude toward choosing a career had changed. This is reflected in this verbatim transcription from a series of comments made by five of the students during one of the discussions.

"I'm prepared for teaching", said one of the girls present. "However, for instance, we take a course in urban sociology and go to Chicago and you see the need there. You see the need for all sorts of things and you realize that this one occupation that you have trained for is not really what you're going to do. And you come out with — and this is what I call one broad flat statement that you base your whole life on from here on out — that you're going to try and truthfully live the Christian life. And this has no relationship whatsoever to being convinced that I'm going to be a teacher from here on out. And I'm almost convinced that I probably won't be. My occupation might change; it may not."

"I think I'd have to say exactly the same thing," responded the student seated next to her. "All I've done this whole year is think about different things I might do, and checking them all off. I really have no idea what I'll even be doing next year."

"On what grounds do you check them off?" asked Acting Dean, Dr. Karl Massanari, who was also present at the discussions.

"Because I suppose one's basic concern has become to be a Christian. And what kind of a job does this demand? How can I best, with my resources, do this job with the implications that it has for the world?"

"I'm going to sound just like them, I'm afraid," said a second girl. "At times I feel as though social work is useless. And whether I couldn't be more useful as a Christian in some other profession — I don't know. I'm just sort of, at this point, feeling my way around."

"Do you feel that your criteria has changed? Do you feel the way you look at a vocation has changed while you've been here?" asked the moderator.

"I think so. Definitely."

A former PAX-man in the group spoke at this point. "When I first came to Goshen I was in the pre-engineering program. When I left school and went to PAX this of course changed everything. When I came back I didn't know what I wanted to do. I came back to Goshen, and took courses in ethics, and Protestant Christianity, and philosophy. I've changed my ideas. I'm not looking for an occupation now at all. My primary goal at this point is to become a person and to become someone who later will be able to do what is asked of him. I think there is a lot of action without much result which results from the choice of occupation too soon. Or you have a certain occupational goal and you work toward this and you don't find meaning in it at all. The reason I'm taking a lot of philosophy and a lot of religion courses is that I want to find something to live for and find a philosophy of life. Then later when opportunities open up I can work at them and make a contribution. I don't know what opportunities will open up. I don't care. I'm ready for anything — I want to be ready for anything."

"I feel a little bit like that," responded the girl across the table from him. "You come here and you feel like you have to have an occupation. And you are kind of worried if you're a freshman and you can't think of anything you'd like to be for sure. I started out thinking I'd probably go into speech therapy. And I dropped it almost immediately. Then this last semester I've all the sudden decided this is what I want to be and so now in my last semester I'm in speech. The reason why I changed — well, when I first started out thinking about speech therapy, I just thought it was a dream — an awfully exciting thing to be in. You know how you are when you're in high school. After I came here I was confused. It's like you want to be about ten people so you can be everything you'd like to be. And you look at all these things and everything that is thrown at you — all these occupations. So you're really confused. But all of a sudden you realize, as these other kids said, it doesn't make so much difference what occupation you are in, if you're in the Lord's will. This is a cliche, I know, but it's really, I feel, very true. So you just stop trying to find an occupation and just try to find yourself and all of a sud-

International Sabbatical

She reports, "In my several months there I was able to do several things. I helped pioneer Dhamtari's program for nursing administration students. This was the first time it had offered field experience to students who had just completed the theory at the Mid-India Board's Graduate School. Two Indore students participated.

"Then I spent some time working on the files for the School of Nursing and Nursing Service. Another major task was to collect statistical information on the hospital during the past ten years. Most of the records were in English, but a few were in Hindi. The study helped to identify trends at the hospital.

"I left Dhamtari feeling that it will always be a part of me. In true Indian style I was honored with a farewell chapel service. Dr. Martin, medical director of the hospital, was dressed in his Sunday best and gave an appropriate speech. One of the students that I had at Indore chaired the meeting.

"I tried to respond with the proper words, but words are so inadequate at such a time. The students placed a lovely mala about my neck and the hospital gave me a piece of silver — one of the Dewoli perfume holders. I have no regrets that I chose to spend most of my sabbatical in India."

MEALS — USUALLY NOT A PROBLEM

In her traveling, food was usually not a major problem for Miss Mosemann. She said, "In India food was cheap. And if it was not very spicy, I could enjoy it. Of course, there is always the basic pile of rice which I could eat if there was nothing else."

On a trip to New Delhi with 20 Indore nursing students and four faculty members, she said, "We faculty were more indulgent at tea time (late afternoon) than at the main meals. One day two of them ate hot dogs, but I have not been away from America long enough to crave this kind of food. But I doubt that I'd ever get hungry for a hot dog."

At the close of her stay in India, after visiting several colleges of nursing and hospitals there and in Nepal, she commented, "I have come to the conclusion that the problems of nursing in India are not unlike those in America.

They talk about the curriculum being in the process of change, lack of budget, problems of student selection, lack of well-qualified faculty. India is an old culture. They are moving forward with the education of women; nursing officials are trying to offer attractive programs. There are now six collegiate programs in India, only two of which are accredited by the Indian Nursing Council. Missionary nurses have every den — it takes longer for some people I think, and I'm not absolutely positive myself — but all of a sudden everything just seems to slip into place."

Religion Gives Meaning to Life . . .

The student who said that "four years of college has given a new meaning to my own life," spoke for many of the other roundtable participants. Another student said it this way, "I found, I suppose, my most enlightening area, somewhere in the field of religion — through the religious courses I have taken — because my background here was very limited, and this is where I felt I gained quite a bit."

The student who said, "At times you had to wonder actually just what do you believe?" also spoke for the group. But he spoke for the group as well when he added, "And I feel this got me to thinking, and I think that was good. Because before I just took it for granted."

Another student spoke of a "broadening of my religious viewpoints, and I think, a deepening of my faith."

Several attributed this directly to the impact of their professors. "Goshen College to me is professors," said one. "What I've found here is not so much in the quality of the schooling but in the attitude of the professors at work. To see this at work in someone else's life — what Christianity has done to certain scholars."

Another added, "I agree that the teacher is all important, and this is what Goshen has that's unique. This has been very valuable for me, I know that. The courses I took, you'd get the same thing in other schools — might even be a little better — but it's not presented in the same way, and you don't have the personal testimony of the teacher."

Three students at one point in one of the discussions became involved in a rather lively interchange which went like this.

It was touched off by this comment, "If I had desired to study Aristotle, I could have found more resources, and been stimulated to work harder somewhere else. I found the life of the teacher more important than the material."

A girl across the table was quick to respond. "Oh, exceedingly! I mean if I would really be serious about art I wouldn't be at Goshen. And I have very high praise for the art department and for what they have prepared me for. But if you are really serious about the subject matter in which you're majoring, you should, in my case, go to a state university which specializes in art or an art school itself. But this is not — and I didn't know this when I came as a freshman — but this is not what I was looking for."

"Aren't you serious about art?" the moderator asked.

The student answered quickly with a great deal of feeling. "Sure I'm serious about art, but I don't devote my full life to it. There's something beyond that."

"I'm serious about Christianity," added the first student with equal feeling. "I'm going to be a Christian, and then whatever else comes —."

"Before you're a scientist, or a historian," broke in a third student.

Centering Down . . .

One of the students seemed to sum up the experiences of her classmates when she spoke of a "centering down." She put it this way. "You realize that there must be some basis, some center, some actual long-range goal that you are working toward — which makes you able to live each day, day by day. And so the center which I think I found at Goshen is knowing that Christ is sufficient. Or that Christianity makes your life so that you don't have to worry about tomorrow."

Goshen: Site of Four Unique Summer Programs

Registered nurses, church music directors, congregational song leaders, and overseas missionaries and service workers will find four "different" courses at Goshen this summer.

"Patients Are Interesting People" will be the subject of a two-week workshop in social science concepts of nursing June 15-26. Dr. Esther Lucile Brown, social anthropologist and author of several nursing books, will lead the workshop, designed for registered nurses working in any health or educational agency. A reduced tuition fee was made possible by a subsidy from the Indiana State Board of Health and a mental health grant from the United States Public Health Service.

A twelve-hour course, to extend from June 3 to August 21, will be "General Nursing." It is designed for graduate registered nurses from non-baccalaureate programs. To help increase the nurse's understanding of needs and health problems through the life span and to increase ability in planning, implementing and evaluating nursing care, the course will include theory and clinical laboratory experience.

Dr. Dwight Weldy will direct a non-credit two-week workshop, June 8-19, for church music directors and song leaders. College credit is available by special arrangement. Cost is $60 (non-credit); $90 (credit).

"Teaching English as a Foreign Language," a three-hour course July 13-July 31, will be taught by Dr. Roy Umble. Designed especially for overseas missionaries, service workers and teachers, the course prepares students for greater service in their foreign assignments.

In addition Goshen College is offering 22 other courses during four three-week terms this summer. For a copy of "Summer Session 1964" write to Dr. Karl Massanari, Acting Dean, Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana 46526.

opportunity to contribute and are doing so."

TO AFRICA

Miss Mosemann left Bombay, India, on January 7 for Addis Ababa, Ethiopia and Africa. After visiting the Carl Kreiders, in Addis Ababa on Goshen College sabbatical, during which he is teaching at the University College, she visited the Nazareth and Haile Mariam Mammo Memorial hospitals. Then she went to Shirati, Tanganyika, for another assignment.

"First I made a survey of the Shirati Nurses' Training Centre. After giving this report, I made a survey of the Shirati Hospital. I enjoyed doing both.

"One of my most thrilling experiences," she says, "was to see the growth of the Shirati Hospital and Mission. I remember the beginning of Shirati in 1934 when my cousin John Mosemann and his wife Ruth first went to Tanganyika. Dr. Lillie Kaufman Shenk, a Goshen graduate, was the first doctor there.

Joseph Burkholder, medical missionary at Deder, Ethiopia, and his family, were one of many Miss Mosemann visited in Africa.

"The hospital now has 104 beds. Presently they are planning to request funds from the Evangelical Central Fund Agency for Development Assistance, Inc., of Germany, for enlarging and improving the physical plant. If this request is granted Shirati will be a model mission hospital."

Miss Mosemann took out time for hippo hunting while at Shirati. "One evening we took a picnic supper to the lake. Elsie Cressman, a registered nurse, took her gun along. She has been wanting to shoot a hippo.

"The hippos usually come out at dusk. And that night three came out. But by the time they got close enough to the shore it was too dark for Elsie to see the end of her gun. But she took a shot anyway, and missed."

ASKED TO OPEN A NURSES' SCHOOL

From Shirati Miss Mosemann went to Somalia. After getting acquainted with Dr. Ivan Leaman and the World Health Organization advisor, they went to see a new 600-bed hospital, built from funds from the European Common Market. But she said, "Officials don't know where to get the doctors and nurses to staff their hospital. Dr. Wagi, the WHO advisor, suggested that we build a School of Nursing close by and train nurses. He feels that this would be a significant contribution."

From Somalia, Miss Mosemann went to Abiriba, Nigeria, where she visited, among others, with Nelda Rhodes, a 1960 Goshen graduate, and helped her with her questions concerning the midwifery school.

On to Ghana and then to Rome and Zurich, where she conferred with the nursing division of WHO on their requirements for overseas nursing personnel, and Miss Mosemann was on her way home. In London she visited the St. Thomas Hospital, of historical significance because Florence Nightingale developed her school of nursing there, and the International Council of Nurses headquarters. "Here I met with Lady Meredith, nursing superintendent of the Christian Missionary Society, for about an hour. She and the others at ICN were quite impressed with my trip."

Home since March 17, Miss Mosemann has been asked to speak at several places — from Lancaster, Pa., to La Junta, Colo. July 1 she will resume her duties as director of Goshen's School of Nursing.

She says, "But there should be a few weeks between now and then that should be more in keeping with the idea of a 'sabbatical.' Right now, I'm hoping for some peace and quiet."

CINCINNATI ORCHESTRA (ABOVE) TO APPEAR, TWO ARTISTS RETURN, FOR 1964-65 LECTURE-MUSIC SERIES. The Roger Wagner Chorale and Karl Robinson will return in next year's Lecture-Music series, Dr. John S. Oyer, chairman of the L-M committee has announced. The Chorale, which appeared in 1958-59 season in Goshen, will be accompanied by its orchestra on Nov. 13; next season is its first for both orchestra and chorale to be on tour.

"Hong Kong" will be presented by Karl Robinson in his fifth appearance at Goshen. His film-lecture will open the season on October 19.

Four other musical numbers are slated. The Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra will appear March 22. The 14-member Paris Chamber Orchestra, with world-famous trumpeter Adolf Scherbaum, will appear March 6.

On February 9 the 24-voice Coro do Brazil will present a program using works of Renaissance masters, Villa-Lobos and other Brazilian composers, Claude Debussy and Maurice Ravel. Baldwin-Wallace College professor Richard Miller will present a tenor voice recital November 27.

FACULTY MEMBERS TO TRAVEL AND STUDY ABROAD THIS SUMMER AND NEXT YEAR. Central America, France and the Orient will welcome four of the faculty, beginning this summer.

Leaving for Central America on June 22 will be Dr. and Mrs. Willard H. Smith, co-directors of the eight-week summer seminar tour for 15 college students.

Dr. Smith is professor of history and political science; Mrs. Smith is assistant professor of Spanish.

Miss Mary E. Bender, professor of French and German, will leave for France on June 29 for an eight-week study of contemporary French society. After a two-week orientation in Paris, she will go on to Pau, France, in the Pyrenees Mountains, for the remainder of the time.

Prof. Bender is one of 25 United States college French teachers to receive this opportunity for study, made possible from the first grant for French professors made by the Committee on International Exchange of Persons, Washington, D.C., a Fulbright program.

Dean Viola M. Good will use her 1964-65 sabbatical leave "to live and serve in a foreign culture long enough to experience 'cultural shock.'" She wants to better understand international students who go through this experience when they come to the United States to study.

To accomplish this she will leave August 27 from San Francisco for service at International Christian University, Tokyo, as visiting consultant in the office of student affairs for the major part of the year. While in Japan she wants to visit Mennonite missionaries, Goshen alumni and then travel to Formosa and Hong Kong to visit other alumni, former international students at Goshen.

THE FIFTH PREVIEW FOR HIGH SCHOOL JUNIORS, STILL OPEN FOR REGISTRATION. For only $20 a high school junior can get a week long preview of college life at Goshen College, June 20-27.

Highlighted during the week will be four workshops, each directed by a Goshen professor. Each junior will choose a workshop of special interest to him. Plans call for workshops in the areas of religion and the life of man; science and mathematics; social science; and literary, dramatic and creative expression.

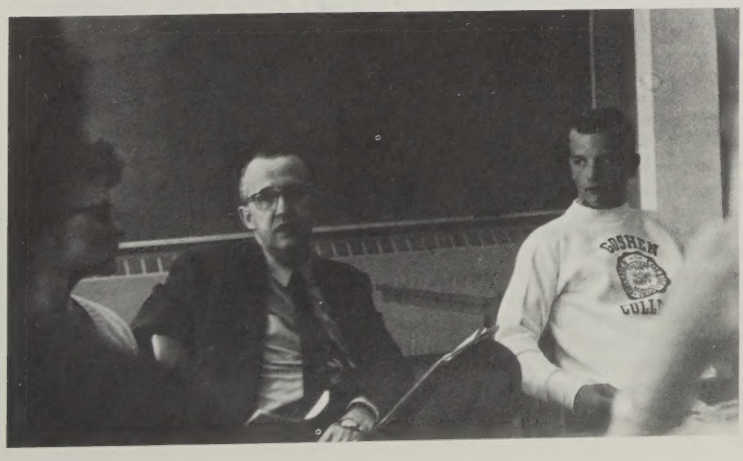
Another highlight will be rooming in college dormitories and boarding in the college dining hall. Students can also visit summer school classes and participate in an aptitude testing program to discover their potential for success in college.

A tradition of the week is an afternoon outing at the Lake Michigan dunes. Previewers usually give an informal program, with vocal and instrumental music, at the end of the week.

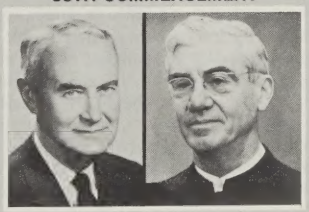
Parents can participate. Planned for them are a special dinner and program on June 20. Saturday night they may stay in college dormitories; Sunday they may worship with the College congregation.

Cost for each previewer is $20. For more information, write to Leland Weldy, "College Preview," Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana 46526.

Prof. John S. Oyer speaks to previewers during a workshop session.



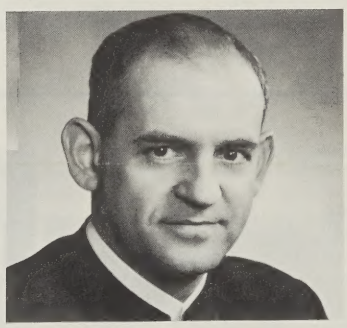
66TH COMMENCEMENT



Dr. Charles L. Taylor and J. D. Graber will be commencement and baccalaureate speakers respectively this spring. Dr. Taylor, executive director of the American Association of Theological Schools, will deliver the commencement address at 10:00 a.m., Monday, June 1. Graber, general secretary of the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities and assistant professor of missions at Goshen College Biblical Seminary, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon at 8:00 p.m., Sunday, May 31.

The A Cappella Choir, joined by additional students, a baritone soloist, and a piano accompanist, will sing Mendelssohn's oratorio for chorus and soloists, "Elijah," at 3:00 p.m., May 31.

All three events will be held in Union Auditorium. Tickets are necessary for the baccalaureate and commencement services.



EDWARD STOLTZFUS, presently pastor of West Liberty's Bethel congregation (Ohio), will be pastor to students next year. A 1953 Goshen graduate, he received his B.D. from the Goshen Seminary in 1956 and his M.A. from Princeton Theological Seminary in 1962.

Stoltzfus will replace Pastor Harold Bauman who will be on leave for the next two years doing graduate study in the area of the relationship between religion and higher education.

"A TIME TO BUILD UP . . ."

There is "a time to every purpose under the heaven" says the Preacher, "a time to break down, and a time to build up."

The past century has been a time of breaking down all over the world. The defective structures and false certainties of centuries and milleniums have fallen in the past hundred years, and life on this planet will almost surely never be the same.

But the time for breaking down has passed; and the time for building up has come. Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy indicated the wide recognition of this fact when he coined the term, "The Concerned Generation" to describe the current student generation.

The time of breaking down is the time of the rebel; the time of building up is the time for concern and commitment. One member of the Concerned Generation, a Vassar senior involved in a remedial reading program in a slum area, put it this way: "Until I began working down here, I felt I had no real function or purpose. Now, I know that unless you have a commitment, you're only half alive."

Goshen has never really been a hot-bed of rebellion, to understate drastically. There is something about the spirit of Goshen which has constantly fostered a kind of quiet concern. And this has in the past often put us outside the mainstream of a society which was dominated by fiery revolutionaries.

But this is no longer so. The very kind of Christian concern which once set us apart from the mainstream of society is now pushing us into it.

It's time for those of us who are Goshen College in society to begin to take this fact seriously, both as individual alumni and as a group. There is something unique about the contribution that we are capable of making in this time of building up. If we fail now to accept the challenges of understanding and acting on the "Goshen Vision," we will be guilty of having squandered an opportunity that may well never return.

The beginning of a new era in the development of the Goshen College Alumni Association is marked by the announcement in this issue of the Newsletter of the appointment of both a permanent editor of the Newsletter and a Director of Alumni Relations.

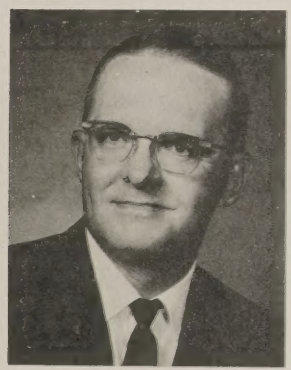
The appointment of two of our fellow alumni to serve us on a professional basis means that we now have the resources to become a coherent and articulate group who are united by this common purpose: to utilize whatever culture we may have acquired in the service of mankind.

The future is exciting. The possibilities seem truly limitless. We can be limited only by the extent of our awareness—as citizens of our society, as individuals, and as alumni of Goshen College—that now is "a time to build up."

Director of Alumni Relations; Newsletter Editor Appointed

The appointment of John H. Liechty '42 as Director of Alumni Relations, and of Mervin D. Zook '59 as editor of the Alumni Newsletter was announced by President Paul Mininger recently.

Liechty, presently of Smithville, Ohio, will join the faculty of Goshen College in late August. Zook joined the faculty February 1 as Director of Communications, and will assume the editorship of the Newsletter with the next issue.



Liechty

As Director of Alumni Relations, Liechty will serve Goshen alumni throughout the nation in setting up local alumni organizations, and by assisting them and the present organizations in various other ways. He will also hold the title of Assistant Director of College Relations, and will work in the other areas of Goshen's overall college relations program.

As Director of Communications, Zook is editor of the Goshen College Bulletin as well as the Alumni Newsletter. In addition he is responsible for providing news items to local newspapers and church periodicals, and for other miscellaneous publications of the College.

Liechty graduated from Goshen in 1942 with a B.A. in economics. He spent the years 1942-46 in Civilian Public Service, and from 1946-56 he operated a farm in his home community of Smithville, Ohio. From 1956-62 he served as a sales representative of the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co., with the exception of a twelve-month period in 1958-59 when he filled an assignment for Mennonite Church Buildings. In 1962 he returned to farming near Smithville.

He is a member of the Oak Grove Mennonite Church, and is serving as the Goshen College counselor in that congregation. He is a member of the male quartet of the Calvary Hour broadcast, and has served as church chorister of his congregation.

Mrs. Liechty is the former Ruth Evelyn Yoder x44. The Liechtys have three children, two of whom will be students at Goshen next year, and the third a high school student.

Zook graduated from Goshen College in 1959 with a B.A. degree in mathematics. He attended Carnegie Tech for one year, and then joined the staff of the Information Services of the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities in Elkhart, Ind. He served there until coming to Goshen, except for another brief period of study at Carnegie Tech in 1962.

Mrs. Zook is the former Martha Joan King '57. They are the parents of one daughter.

FORMER EXCHANGE STUDENT HEADS DUTCH ANTI-SMOKING CAMPAIGN

Dr. L. Meinsma, a Dutch exchange student at Goshen College during the 1946-47 school year, is now director of the Netherlands Cancer Information Bureau and head of the anti-smoking campaign in the Netherlands.

The Netherlands government, one of the first to take positive action on this problem, has launched a $56,000 campaign against smoking aimed at parents, teachers and school children.

The Northwestern Ohio Alumni chapter met on May 1 in the State Room, Archbold with 63 persons attending. Verlin Eash '53 presided and Dr. '28 and Mrs. x30 S. A. Yoder were speakers. Officers for the coming year are: Mrs. Ruth (Egsti) '51 Miller, Pres.; Dr. George Horst '51, Sec.; and Bob Weaver '60 Treas.

Newsletter Story Includes 13 Editors; Numerous Changes

The appointment of Mervin D. Zook '59 as editor of the Newsletter makes him the fourteenth person to fill this position. His thirteen predecessors have seen the Newsletter through years that were filled with change—changes in Goshen itself, in the character of its alumni, and in the Newsletter.

The first edition of the Alumni Newsletter was published following the 1911 commencement. For some time prior to that first issue alumni had been expressing a desire for a publication to serve as a medium for exchanging news between the members of the Association. At the Alumni business meeting of the 1911 commencement, funds were appropriated and an editor, Paul E. Whitmer '05 was appointed.

In the very first issue Editor Whitmer editorialized on a problem which has haunted Newsletter editors ever since. Alumni wanted news about each other, but they had to be coaxed, threatened and begged to volunteer information about themselves and their activities to the editor.

Originally the Newsletter was distinctly an alumni operation. The Association financed the operation which in 1912 cost about $10 per issue. Currently, the Newsletter, published by the College as a special edition of the Bulletin, costs approximately $300 per issue and goes to 9,000 alumni instead of the 200 who received it in 1912.

In its early days the Newsletter contained just about all the news concerning the College along with the alumni news. The Ramblers were mentioned often in those early issues.

The Ramblers, a male quartet, began singing together in 1909 and sang at Goshen College frequently until 1918. A. J. Miller '11, L. B. Greenwalt a11, A. S. Ebersole '22, and John L. Yoder x11, reunited at the 1929 commencement festivities to again provide music by the Rambler quartet.

In July 1913 Mrs. J. M. Kurtz '11, wife of Prof. J. M. Kurtz a11, became editor of the Newsletter. Prof. Kurtz was very active in alumni affairs during his years at Goshen and in July of 1915 was himself elected editor at an annual salary of $5.

Due to reasons not explained in the Newsletter itself, it was not published from January, 1919 to February, 1926. Needless to say, the College was going through a very difficult time. In 1926 it came out again this time under the direction of an editorial committee composed of F. S. Ebersole '04, S. W. Witmer '14, and E. A. Meyer '20, in these years of recovery the school was bustling with activity under the leadership of Pres. S. C. Yoder. An item in 1927 notes that the alumni whalloped the students 27-16 in basketball.

Prof. Silas Hertzler '13, became editor in May, 1929, and J. B. Cressman '21, took over from him in February 1930. In July of 1931 Prof. John Umble, Jr. '05, took over the editor's job for what turned out to be a 21 year tenure. By this time the Newsletter was running 12 pages and from time to time there was a 16 page issue. By 1940 the 16 page Newsletter was standard size.

In September of 1940 the faculty expressed appreciation to the alumni for conributions which made it possible to limit the cut in their salaries to only 5 per cent instead of the 10 per cent that had been expected.

Both the depression in the '30s and the war in the '40s affected the publication of the Newsletter, as well as the news it carried, and the publication schedule had to be adjusted according to the availability of both money and material.

In 1952 Prof. Umble Jr. '05 turned the Newsletter over to S. A. Yoder '28, and devoted his time to writing his fifty year history of Goshen College. S. A. Yoder served as editor until January of 1955 when Nelson Springer '41 took the job. Virgil Vogt '54 became editor in the fall of 1956 and carried his job on a part time basis while he attended the seminary. In September of 1962 Vogt turned over the editing of the Newsletter to Ivan J. Kauffman '64.

During the past two years the format of the Newsletter has been altered in an attempt to keep pace with the changing character of the Goshen Alumni, and to coordinate it with the other publications of the College.

THREE RECEIVE MEDICAL DEGREES FROM INDIANA UNIVERSITY WITH HONORS

Two Goshen alumni graduated from the Indiana University Medical School and one from the Indiana University School of Dentistry with honors this spring.

The three were Mary Jean Yoder '60 and Wallace A. Shellenberger '60 who received M.D. degrees both with honors. Both were also elected to membership in Alpha Omega Alpha, a national honorary medical fraternity.

L. Eugene Long '60 received a D.D.S. degree from the Indiana University School of Dentistry with honors. He was elected to membership in Omicron Kappa Upsilon, the national honorary dental fraternity.

Dr. Mary Jean Yoder was killed in an automobile accident near Goshen on June 12. Her parents and younger sister were also injured in the accident. She had graduated from Indiana University Medical school on June 8, and was to have been married on June 27.

THE FUTURE OF THE LIBERAL ARTS . . .

"The liberal arts tradition is dead or dying," said Dean Barzun of Columbia, in a speech last December.

"For Dr. Barzun, liberal education is apparently the learning of a game called self-cultivation, which the college graduate can play when he is tired of watching television," answer the student editors of the Columbia Daily Spectator — thus opening another round in the ongoing debate over the worth of the liberal arts.

Will the liberal arts survive the present emphasis on professional and technical training? Should they survive? If the liberal arts tradition is "dead or dying," what is the future of the small liberal arts college — and what is the future of Goshen College?

The answers we give to these questions will depend on what we mean when we say 'liberal arts.' If the students at Columbia are correct in asserting that ". . . the intellectual life for Dr. Barzun is merely a sophisticated amusement," then his outlook for the liberal arts is probably correct. But is this the true concept of liberal arts? The students at Columbia seem not to think so, and neither do we.

Education of any kind inherently involves some idea of what the student should become. The Christian idea of man is that he is related, vitally and intimately, to something infinite — to the ultimate source of all being and knowledge which is God. Man thus lives not only a physical life, but also a life of the spirit. For the first life it is enough to know how to make a living, but for the second we must know how to make life worth living.

This is perhaps why the liberal arts — although actually a product of classical culture — have historically had their greatest flowering under the leadership of the Christian church. Only if man is more than his own immediate existence do the liberal arts really make sense, for only then do we have reason to look beyond our purely physical problems.

If the only purpose of a college education is a higher income, then there is little reason to engage in study which does not advance one economically. But if the spiritual is also — along with the temporal — a real part of our humanity, then the study of history and literature and religion becomes much more than "a sophisticated amusement." It is then, in the most profound sense, a matter of life or death.

The well-known scare put into American higher education by Sputnik could actually do more to turn education into mere mechanical training than to really improve it. Only the church (which led in establishing education in the United States) appears capable of saving it from this fate. For it is the church (in varying degrees of perfection to be sure) which is committed to the great reality that 'man does not live by bread alone.'

Two Special Nursing Courses At GC This Summer

"Patients Are Interesting People" is a special workshop for registered nurses working in any health or educational agency—schools, public health, or hospitals—or as administrators or teachers of nursing.

Esther Lucile Brown, Ph.D., social anthropologist and author of nursing books including "Nursing for the Future" and "Newer Dimensions of Patient Care," will lead the workshop.

Dates for the workshop—to be offered as the course, "Nursing 360 — Social Science Concepts in Nursing," are June 15-26.

The course will carry two semester credit hours, and may also be audited. The reduced tuition fee of $40 (for both credit and non-credit students) is made possible by a subsidy from the Indiana State Board of Health and a mental health grant from the United States Public Health Services.

Enrollment will be limited, according to Verna Zimmerman '45, acting director of the School of Nursing and assistant professor of nursing. Deadline for applications is May 1. Applications will be accepted after May 1 if there are vacancies.

Persons desiring credit must submit a transcript of school of nursing credits and work taken at other colleges or universities. A pre-registration fee of $10 must accompany the application, to be sent to Miss Zimmerman.

A second course, "Nursing 450 — General Nursing," will carry 12 credit hours and will extend over a 12-week period, June 3 to August 31.

To be taught by Norma Jean Weldy '54 and Frances Bontrager, both assistant professors of nursing at Goshen, the course is designed for graduate registered nurses from non-baccalaureate programs.

The aim of the course is to help the nurse to increase her understanding of needs and health problems throughout the life span and to increase her ability in planning, implementing and evaluating nursing care. The course includes theory and clinical laboratory experience. Enrollment is limited to persons who have met the prerequisites for the course.

For more information on Nursing 450 or to apply, write to Dr. Karl Massanari '36, Acting Dean of Goshen College.

Goshen Plans 66th Commencement

TAYLOR AND GRABER TO BE COMMENCEMENT SPEAKERS; A CAPPELLA TO SING "ELIJAH"

Dr. Charles L. Taylor, executive director of the American Association of Theological Schools, will deliver the commencement address at 10:00 Monday morning, June 1, in the Union Auditorium.

J. D. Graber '25, general secretary for the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities and assistant professor of missions at the Goshen College Biblical Seminary, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon Sunday, May 31, at 8:00 p.m. in the Union Auditorium. The A Cappella Choir will sing.

Another highlight of Goshen's 66th commencement will be the singing of Mendelssohn's oratorio for chorus and soloists, "Elijah," on Sunday, May 31 at 3:00 p.m. in the Union Auditorium. Dr. Dwight Weldy '40, professor of music at Goshen, will conduct the A Cappella Choir, which will be joined by some additional students and a piano accompanist. All solos except the role of Elijah, a baritone, will be done by college students. The 1½ hour work, shortened from 2½ hours, depicts Elijah's problems with the children of Israel and particularly during the time of Queen Jezebel's influence, according to Prof. Weldy. "Elijah" was also sung at commencement time in 1955 and 1957 at Goshen.

In other events on the official calendar, the service for graduating classes of the Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries will be held at Prairie Street Mennonite Church, Elkhart, at 3:00 p.m. on Sunday, May 24.

The Senior Class Program will be at 1:30 p.m., May 30, on the college lawn if weather permits. At 3:30 p.m. the Senior Nursing Class will give its program in the Church-Chapel.

Tickets are necessary for the baccalaureate and commencement services.

FOUR CLASSES TO MEET ON MAY 30

Alumni from the 10-year, 25-year, 40-year and 50-year classes will hold reunions in Goshen in connection with the College's 1964 spring commencement. The Dining Hall will arrange for special tables for these classes at the annual Alumni Banquet and for members of other classes as well, if they request it.

Class of '14

Alumni will meet at Miller's Country Restaurant, three miles north of Goshen on State Road 15 for a noon luncheon on May 30. No tickets are required.

Dr. Samuel W. '14 and Sana (Troyer '14) Witmer are inviting all A.B. graduates (and their spouses) of the class of '14 to an afternoon tea the same day, 2:00-4:00 p.m. in their home, 1608 South Eighth Street, Goshen. Dr. Witmer says a group picture of 50-year grads will be taken at the tea.

Class of '24

Dr. Lillie Shenk Kaufman '24 has invited all members of the class of '24 to an afternoon tea, 3:00-5:00 p.m., on May 30, at her home, 901 Mervin Avenue, Goshen. She wants members of the class to reply as to whether they can attend, and if not, to send a letter for reading to the group.

Class of '39

'39-ers will have a reunion 1:30-4:30 p.m., May 30, with place to be announced later, according to Isaiah B. Harley '39, class president.

Class of '54

A reunion and short program is scheduled from 1:30 to 5:00 p.m., May 30 at the College Cabin, according to Paul Fry '54. He wants class members to reply to him by May 15 if they can attend, and if not, to send a letter, pictures or recording. If class members need lodging, he would like a reply by April 25.

PRES. MININGER TO SPEAK AT ALUMNI BANQUET

Pres. Mininger '34 will be the main speaker at the annual Alumni Banquet in the Alumni Memorial Dining Hall Saturday, May 30, at 6:00 p.m.

Dr. Donald G. Miller '50, president of the Alumni Association, will be chairman of the meeting. Toastmaster will be Willis Breckbill '54. A member from the 50-year, 40-year, and 25-year classes will give toasts. A men's senior quartet will provide special music.

At the banquet members of Goshen's 1964 graduating class become members of the Alumni Association, and living graduates of the class of '14 will receive 50-year plaques.

Special tables will be reserved for classes holding reunions, and for other classes with significant numbers attending.

Tickets for the banquet will be available at the door. The price will be $1.75.

Alumni Giving Almost To $50,000 Mark, But Only 1600 Have Given

Sixteen per cent of Goshen's almost 10,000 alumni have given $47,166.50 toward the $76,000 goal.

A total of 1,616 alumni have responded to one of three causes — the Alumni Faculty Fund (provides an allowance for retired faculty, a reserve for retirement of present faculty and for faculty sabbatical leaves), Seminary Roll Call (books for Seminary library), and other alumni gifts (toward Goshen's development program).

Goshen's men and women, perhaps like you, know the value of the Alumni Faculty Fund, this year's major project. Older alumni have realized the sacrifice older profs made (earning $1,500 a year in the 1930's) and have been glad to help in their retirement. Younger alumni have been interested in faculty improvement through the study and experience of sabbaticals.

While Goshen may never compete financially with big schools, it can maintain an alert and high calibre faculty through this program.

An editorial in The Goshen News recently stated, "Indiana may have bigger schools but it doesn't have a better one than Goshen College."

If you haven't sent your contribution for this year's Alumni Drive, won't you drop it in the mail tonight?

Alumni Meeting In Five Areas

Eastern Pennsylvania

Robert S. Gotwals '51, chairman, has announced a banquet at Christopher Dock Mennonite School, Lansdale, Pa., at 6:30 p.m., April 25, for all area alumni. Dr. Glen R. Miller, professor of chemistry and head of the division of natural sciences at Goshen, will be guest speaker.

Chicago

Chicago area alumni will meet at a downtown Chicago YMCA to hear Dr. C. Franklin Bishop '40, professor of biology at Goshen, on Saturday evening, April 25, according to Harry Gerber '57, vice president. Definite time and place, and special music arrangements will be announced to area alumni later, he said.

Cleveland

Marilyn Liechty (Mrs. Mark B.) Moffett '57, reports Goshen College alumni of the Cleveland area are planning a spring meeting, tentatively planned for the latter part of May.

California

A Goshen alumni reunion is under way for this summer, according to Elma A. Shoup (Mrs. Lester C.) Reeser x44.

Southwestern Ohio

Sixty nine, including six high school seniors, attended a March 20 banquet at Valley High Ski Resort, near West Liberty, Ohio. "Conductor" of the meeting — the theme of which was "Musical Notes" — was Roy S. Koch '45. Newly elected officers for the chapter are Joe David Yoder '52, pres.; David Smucker x63, vice-pres.; and Carol Hostetler '52, sec.-treas.

Class Of '14 Small And Active

DR. AND MRS. SAMUEL W. WITMER—BIOLOGIST-TEACHER-HOMEMAKER TEAM FOR 49 YEARS

Originally from Farmersville in Lancaster Co., Pa., Dr. Witmer is the oldest of nine (eight living) children.

Since he was 17 (he was born in 1888) he's been either teaching or preparing to teach better.

Now, almost 60 years later, retired and Professor Emeritus of Biology at Goshen, he's still teaching. This semester he's teaching a course in heredity to three students.

Mrs. Witmer, originally from West Liberty, Ohio, has also taught, but she's known more as a homemaker. She taught one year at Youngstown, Ohio (1914-15), and the following year at Devil's Lake, North Dakota. She taught part-time in the Goshen College Academy in 1920, 1927-30, and 1931-33, and in the College 1935-36. The Witmers have one daughter Mildred '42.

So many things could be said about the Witmers. For example they've teamed together for at least five major "plant-hunting expeditions." Together they've explored Mexico twice.

They've also gone to Churchill, Manitoba, halfway up the western side of Hudson Bay.

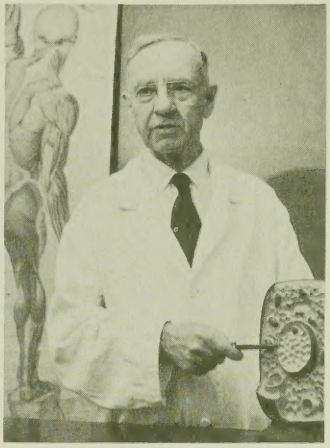
Another time they went to the Gaspe peninsula in southeastern Quebec and to Bonaventure Island, off the peninsula in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. After getting special permission, the Witmers walked across the two-mile-wide island and took pictures of gannets, birds big as geese related to the pelican.

Almost Didn't Come to Goshen

In 1914 Dr. Witmer had two job opportunities—one at Gretna, Man., and another at Tuleta, Texas—when Pres. Hartzler '10 asked him to prepare to teach at Goshen. A major in philosophy and education, he changed and received his master's degree in biological science from the University of Wisconsin in 1915 and returned to Goshen that fall.

Former Students Make Good

Dr. Witmer, an official bird-



bander and the Elkhart County cooperative weather observer for the U.S. Weather Bureau, finds greatest delight in remininiscing about former students, who got their beginnings under his watchful care.

Clayton Kratz x21, was one of his superior students. When the Mennonite Relief Committee wanted him to go to Europe after World War I to help the refugees, he went. He disappeared in Russia; Goshen's new men's dormitory, Clayton Kratz Hall, is named in his honor.

C. A. Fulmer '22 was another. He is today president of the Middle States Association, accrediting agency for secondary school and colleges.

"Dr. Orie J. Eigsti, '31," says Witmer, "credits me with my getting him started in biology." A history major at Goshen, Dr. Eigsti later became known as the developer of the seedless watermelon.

Who would have dreamed that a boy in Lancaster County, who once lost a spelling match because he used the alternate spelling of "scimiter" (spelled alternately as "scimitar," means a "sword") would have made such a contribution to Goshen?

CHARLES L. SHANK—MISSIONARY, MACHINIST

Charles married Crissie C. Yoder '13, a teacher at Bethel College, Newton, Kansas, on July 4, 1914. Before they were married Charles and Crissie had volunteered as overseas missionaries to India.

In India Charles taught handicrafts to the boys at Dhamtari from experience he had gained as a mechanical engineering student at Purdue University (he did not attend Goshen four consecutive years).

Climatic and health difficulties in India forced the Shanks and their daughter Ruth to return in 1919. Home, Charles worked as a machinist.

He writes, "Our family grew, and the dear wife and invalid daughter passed into the Great Beyond."

On a visit to Goshen College for Alumni Day, he met Lydia F. Shenk, a GC French teacher. Their friendship blossomed into marriage, and she adopted Charles' family.

Charles writes, "Today our children are pretty widely scattered.

"Mary '43 and her husband Ernest Lehman '42 are overseas service workers in Jordan; they have adopted two children.

"David '48, his wife (Wilma Holopeter '46), and their two sons and two daughters are in Ohain, Belgium.

"Ernest '49, his wife (Elizabeth Howell) and their three daughters live in Sarasota, Florida.

"Esther '49 has done advanced work in dietetics and is presently head of dietetics at Goshen Hospital.

"Lois '51, who graduated with Goshen's first nursing class, is with her husband (Glenn E. Musselman '51) in Sertaozinho, Brazil. The Musselmans, overseas missionaries, have five daughters.

"Two bypassed college. Paul, a tool and die maker, and his wife (Janet Shearer) and their adopted son Ricky live in Wooster, Ohio. Mary Kay, who trained in a hospital nursing program, married Howard Snider. They and their four daughters live in Kalamazoo, Michigan."

During and after World War II Charles has worked as a machinist, working supervisor, then toolman, and finally tool grinder. Since retiring Charles has his own shop at home where he specializes in refitting carpenters' tools and miscellaneous repair jobs.

ELLEN E. YODER—"I CHERISH MY MANY FRIENDSHIPS, ESPECIALLY WITH YOUNG PEOPLE"

Presently a Philadelphian, Miss Ellen Yoder writes, "Since my graduation from Goshen in 1914, I have been continuously employed, except for one year of study at Carnegie Library School in Pittsburgh, where I received my B.L.S. in 1918.

"In 1925 I went to Philadelphia. I have been a high school librarian at Philadelphia High School for Girls, Olney High School and Central High School for Boys. I taught in library schools at Temple University and Penn State College (now Pennsylvania State University) for many summers.

"After my retirement from Central in 1954, I have done special cataloging in private and hospital libraries.

"Through the years I have had time for travel in our country and in Europe. My last trip abroad in 1956 was for six months with friends in Denmark, Norway, Switzerland and the British Isles.

"Through the years I have associated with interesting people in my profession and the Book World. It has been a rewarding vocation, and I cherish my many friendships, especially with the young people, whom I shall never sell short, after having worked with them for 50 years."

Goshen To Offer Church Music And "El Salvador" Summer Programs

Dr. Dwight Weldy '40, professor of music at Goshen, will direct a two-week workshop for church music directors and congregational song leaders June 8-19 at Goshen.

The workshop will carry no credit, unless special arrangement is made with Director of Admissions J. B. Shenk '51 and Prof. Weldy.

Participants will register Monday morning, June 8; they will attend the first session that afternoon.

Cost of the workshop, including room and board is $60, or $90 for those who want credit.

Goshen alumni may also participate in a summer seminar in El Salvador from June 22 to August 14. The Council of Mennonite Colleges, of which Goshen is a member, is sponsoring this first seminar in international studies.

Dr. Henry D. Weaver, Jr., professor of chemistry at Goshen, made a 26-day 5,000-mile trip to Central America and the Caribbean area early this year to check on arrangements with national and U.S. embassy officials for the travel-study seminar. He said, "The Salvadorans basically seem flattered that we want to study them. The country is not geared to tourism and represents a relatively unspoiled country."

Six semester hours of upper-level college credit is available to participants. Inclusive fee is $400. Although the deadline was April 1, late applications will be considered if there are vacancies.

For more information on either of the programs, or to apply, write to Acting Dean Karl Massanari.

Alumni Board Holds Annual Meeting

Highlight of the Alumni Association directors annual meeting at Goshen College on April 18 was a tour of renovated Science Hall (cost, $125,000) and Kratz Hall, to be finished in time for occupancy in September, 1964.

In reports on campus development and plans for the future, the directors noted that progress on a new library was stalled because $160,000 in contributed funds is still needed for Kratz Hall before an appeal can be made for another major building, according to J. Robert Kreider '41, director of college relations.

Pres. Mininger '34 outlined for the board the importance of the church college and the amount of contributions needed in the years ahead. He said that "alumni are a vital source for this support, because one of the criteria for industry support is the record of alumni participation."

Faculties of Mennonite Colleges Meet Here

ASSOCIATED MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARIES
MENN. HIST. LIBRARY
JAN 19

The faculties of Goshen, Eastern Mennonite and Hesston Colleges are studying together on the Goshen campus August 23 to 28. The Workshop on the Church College, as it is called, is the first joint Mennonite college faculty workshop.

Three basic purposes have been expressed by the planning committee. The first concern is to evaluate the present self-understanding of Mennonite higher education. This is being done in light of both the past rationale and the present trends in the church's educational program. The second purpose is to get all of the faculties involved actively in clarifying the role and purpose of their college and of each department in the college. The third purpose of the workshop is to promote a base of understanding and cooperation among Mennonite educators.

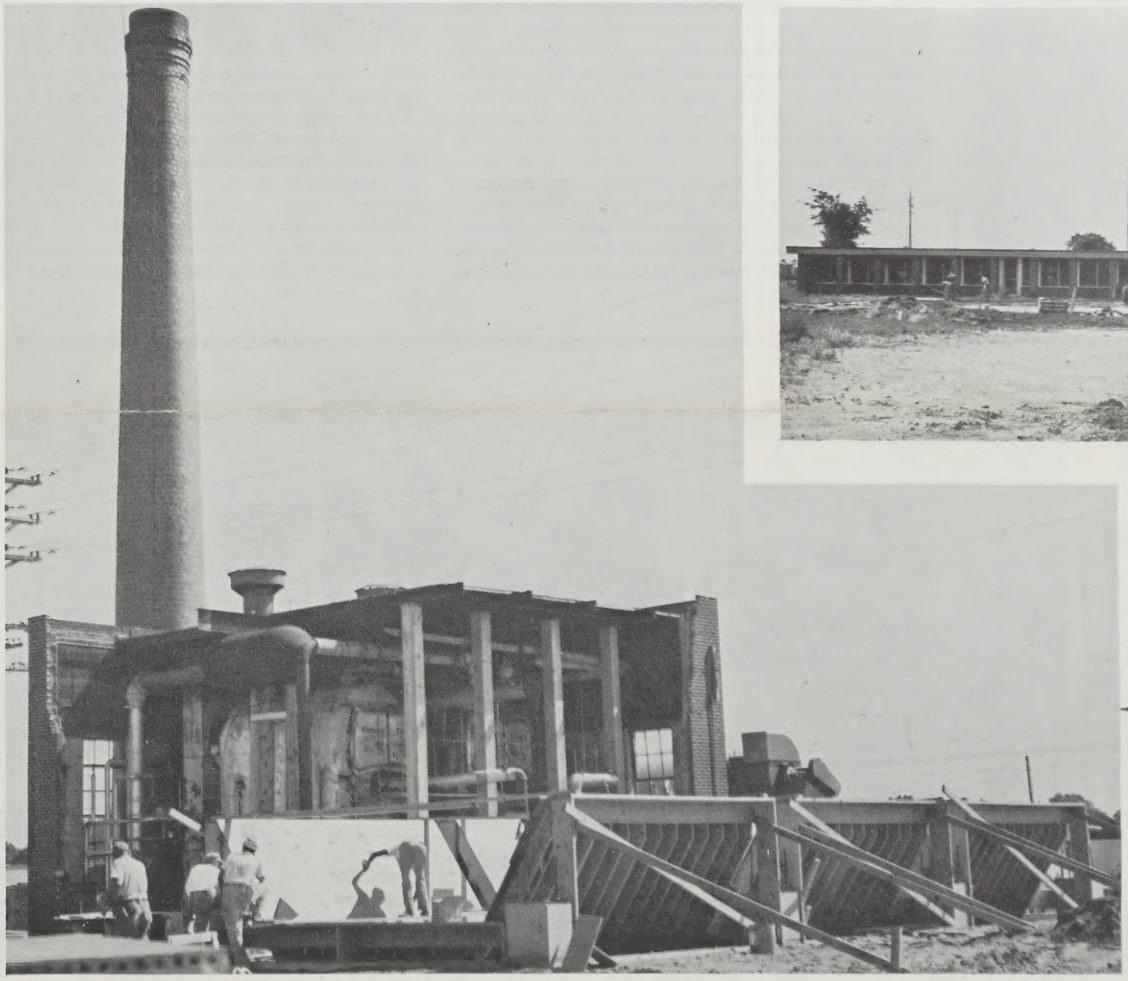
The study is centered around five papers being presented by faculty members from the three colleges. The papers will not focus attention exclusively on theology, but rather on the implications of Mennonite theological understandings for the educative task of the church-college.

The first four papers deal with education and Christian understandings of revelation, man, the church, and vocations. The final one is concerned with the Mennonite understanding of the church and its implication for the common life of the church-college campus.

President Mininger was appointed chairman of the planning committee composed of persons from the three colleges. The committee has been at work for more than a year. Included in the preparations for the workshop were three preliminary papers studied during the past school year by the faculties of all three colleges. These papers introduced the history of church-colleges, the Mennonite philosophy of higher education and the major issues confronting church-colleges today.

Dr. C. Norman Kraus, Goshen's professor of Bible, is serving as director of the workshop, and has been responsible for planning the details in scheduling. Dr. Kraus says that the workshop has been designed to encourage maximum participation by each person, and not necessarily to formulate complete and tidy answers to the questions involved. In order to spread the discussion as far as possible, faculty members spend most of their time in small study groups following each daily lecture. The planning committee expects that this workshop will open up questions in which each school, each department and each faculty member will continue to study at greater length.

Dorm Completed: Heating Plant Under Construction



Kratz Hall will be ready to use in September. The interior is getting the finishing touches and landscaping was started in July. The new dorm will house 132 men. The one story wing connecting Kratz Hall and Yoder Hall (back of wing) contains an apartment for the head resident, a public lobby and lounge area and recreation rooms which will serve both dorms.

The central heating plant is being expanded this summer to house a new automatic-operation boiler unit. The wooden forms in the picture show the shape of the new coal bunkers from which coal will automatically feed to the unit. The old unit, temporarily exposed for lack of walls, will serve as a reserve system. The new system will provide more heat with less smoke and fewer maintenance problems. The cost is expected to run between $120,000 and $135,000.

President Mininger Discusses the Liberal Arts

In this informal discussion with Pres. Paul Mininger, he comments on the meaning and aims of the liberal arts approach to education. The comments below were selected from a transcription of a longer conversation with the editor held last month in the President's office.

LIBERAL ARTS AND DISCIPLESHIP

At Goshen College we are interested in producing a certain kind of person. We do have objectives; we want to produce Christians. Our conception of a Christian is that he is a "disciple." Now a disciple is a person who has met Jesus Christ and who has voluntarily committed himself to Christ in the light of all the other options which he has faced. Goshen College is not interested in producing a person who merely believes certain things and behaves in a certain way — the way everyone else in his community has always behaved. This kind of indoctrination — this making carbon copies of people — is basically contrary, it seems to me, to what a Christian is. It is also contrary to what the liberal arts college is trying to do, because the objective of liberal arts is to free the person so that he can act out of freedom rather than out of compulsion.

We need to remember that even God leaves the person free. We can work with God by giving a witness, but the final encounter comes between the person and God, and the person can decide "no" as well as "yes." I think this is the way we want it. This is the way it must be. We as faculty members often see the tragic cases of young people who have been so socially conditioned that they cannot really face up to any other options than the one they have been taught. They are bound rather than free.

What we are seeking to do as a college of the church is to deliver to the church and to the world persons who have freely chosen Christ — rather than persons who are so bound that they are not free. We want our students to become free men in Christ, rather than persons who are completely tied up emotionally, and who can't really face up to life.

Another thing I think we should say is that through our educational program — and we have to do this with a great deal of care and caution — we also must expose our young people to other options besides the Christian faith. There may have been a time in the past when this would have been unnecessary, although I think it is always necessary to make this choice. But today, with the kind of exposure that young people face as they leave college, they are sooner or later going to have to face up to these options. And so we believe that it is better for them to face up to these while they are here, rather than to hear only one side of the question. Otherwise they may later feel that they were cheated in their college experience and did not receive the whole story.

LIBERAL ARTS AND CHRISTIAN COMMITMENT

Many schools and universities do not assume responsibility for anything outside the intellectual. They let the individual commit himself to whatever he wishes. This is a private matter, they feel. Actually one university I know of does not assume any responsibility for the morals of its students — or for their basic goals. They say this is not their business — this is not higher education. You build another institution to do this sort of thing!

But at Goshen College one of our major objectives is to help the individual to make a Christian commitment which then transforms his whole value system. This is not something added at the end. As a person seeks meaning and purpose for his own life at Goshen, he does so in an environment — in a community of faith — where the faculty are believing persons.

Of course, there are many students that come to us with this kind of commitment, and then our task is to lead them in working out what this commitment means in terms of that student's interpretation of the world, of nature, the universe, history, their profession. All of this must be interpreted in the light of their basic commitment to Christ.

There is rather widespread today in some areas the view that the young person goes to the university or the college and there he seeks truth. But often, the hidden pre-supposition here is that one can't really know the truth. So you just keep on seeking, and you never really expect to find answers. The hidden presupposition is that if you are open-minded you can't really ultimately know anything. So all of life becomes a search, and such persons never realize that finally one does make a commitment. One does have to accept something. One does have to have some kind of a living faith. If you are going to live in this world you can't always be pursuing and seeking. At a certain point you do have to make commitments.

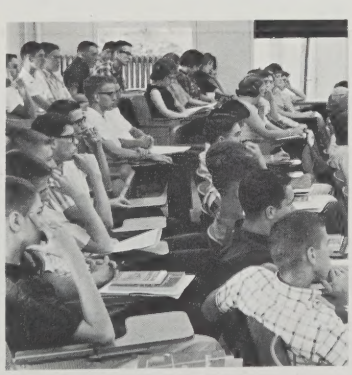
TEACHER AND STUDENT IN CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

When Jesus used the term "disciple" he took a term that was very common in his day. Many teachers in his day gathered disciples around them in a way that involved not only learning specific skills, but in most instances a personal relationship between the teacher and his disciple as well. In the same way, in a Christian college setting — although we would certainly not place the teacher in the same relationship to the student as to Jesus Christ — the teacher not only leads the student in learning chemistry, for instance. We also

Summer at Goshen

The summer months at Goshen are filled with a wide diversity of activity. Courses are offered for college and seminary students who wish to accelerate their work or to make up deficiencies. There is a traveling class in international studies. A workshop is offered for special interest or professional groups. Several faculty members are doing research or writing dissertations. There are scholars from other institutions using the Mennonite Historical Library and Archives. And there is "College Preview," a special week of introduction to college life for high school students.

Regular college courses like Dr. C. F. Bishop's Botany class are condensed into three weeks of concentration on a single subject — instead of being one of five courses stretched over an 18 week semester. Botany is a good course to take in the summer because plants are in the most dramatic part of their life cycle.



A record-sized group of College Previewers turned out to try Goshen's unique plan for introducing high school juniors to college life. They attended a variety of special classes and a series of convocations on Mennonite history. They were tested to help them determine their abilities and interests. And there was time for recreation.

A two-week workshop for nurses featured Dr. Esther Lucille Brown, a social anthropologist, a lecturer. The workshop, made possible by grants from the Indiana State Board of Health and the United States Public Health Service, dealt with the subject of the total human needs, beyond their immediate medical ones, that hospital patients have.

want to establish a personal relationship between the teacher and student in which there is a sharing of their spiritual pilgrimages at a very deep level.

Just last week, Atlee Beechy and I talked about this very thing. We both feel that if we are to survive in the future, and to really carry out our unique Christian purposes, we must maximize the teacher-student relationship. We must enable the teacher to influence the student — to establish a closer relationship so that at the point of crucial decision the teacher is there to make his contribution. The teacher should not override, or dominate, but he should serve as a resource.

A few years ago one of our more intellectual students was going through a very difficult experience. He was really about to lose his faith. Reflecting on those days when he was really struggling, he said. "What I needed and wanted was not really answers to my intellectual problems. What I really wanted more than anything else was to hear one of my teachers say that Christ was real to him." We as a faculty feel that this is crucial.

HOW LIBERAL ARTS SERVE THE CHURCH

As I visualize our purpose it is to prepare persons so that they can serve and witness in the world as individuals. Through liberal arts education we are preparing young people to live in tomorrow's world.

To prepare a young person for life in the kind of world in which he or she is going to live, he needs to be acquainted with the past out of which our society and world has emerged. He needs also to know the kind of world in which we are living today. He needs to study history and our contemporary life. He needs to be exposed to certain disciplines which will develop him as a person and sharpen his mental powers, so that he can continue to learn.

For example, one of the most important skill subjects today is communication — speaking, listening, reading, and writing. If one is going to function effectively today — if he is to develop his total powers as a person, these skills are basic. These are the skills which are taught in the basic communications course of a liberal arts program. We also require foreign language courses because we are living in a world where people are going to have to communicate across national boundaries. We believe that students ought to master more than their own mother tongue in order to understand other people, and to be able to communicate with them.

Of course we are also interested in preparing persons for the tasks that the church institutions need to have done — ministers, teachers for Christian schools, nurses, Christian social workers, etc. In addition to this, we are emphasizing at Goshen those service professions through which an individual Christian can fulfill the Christian ideals of compassion and service. What this means for the future development of our institution is not clear at this time. But for the present it means the Seminary, the School of Nursing, teacher education, pre-medical work and preliminary study in social work. I have sometimes thought that in the future we should actually have a school of social work and offer a graduate program of two years in social work — particularly with so many people these days going into this field. This would be especially important in light of the fact that in so many of the schools of social work, the view of man is a rather mechanistic one. This means of course that the articulation of one's Christian faith, and the skills that one needs to have in exercising it, are not going to be found in a setting like this.

GOSHEN AND THE CHURCH FACE FORWARD

I feel that the college is facing a tremendous opportunity at this point in the history of the church, and in its own history. Whether or not we are going to really be able to meet this challenge is still unknown. We face the temptation to seek to ride on the traditions of the past and simply perpetuate forms that we now have.

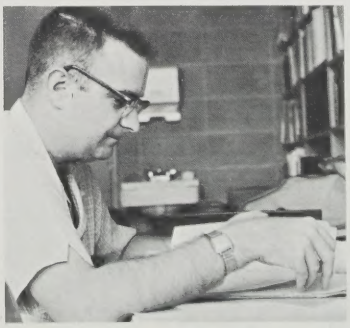
I see the church as just emerging from a period of isolated traditionalism — of transmitting a tradition from one generation to the next. We have often converted Christ and the gospel to a stereotyped way of life. And in doing this we have been untrue to the real heart of our heritage, which is one of flexibility in meeting new situations — under the guidance of the Word of God, the Holy Spirit and the voice of the church. We have made a virtue out of the unchanged transmission of forms.

There has been, however, something preserved in our tradition which is vital and which is an essential part of the Christian gospel and of the early experience of the church. Through the research of several scholars in recent years, particularly under the leadership of the late Harold S. Bender, some vital aspects of our tradition have been isolated and identified. I am afraid, however, that they have not yet become embodied in the life of the church. Today they exist in the minds of many persons, but they have not yet been translated into a living reality in the contemporary situation.

Now the job that we have here is to translate these insights into contemporary situations. This is now our task. This is now our job at Goshen. We can at this point, it seems to me, no longer be satisfied with merely verbalizing those concepts, or we'll last about ten years and then simply be another college in northern Indiana. We must somehow find a way of expressing and embodying those concepts in contemporary forms, in which case we can make a vital contribution to the world.

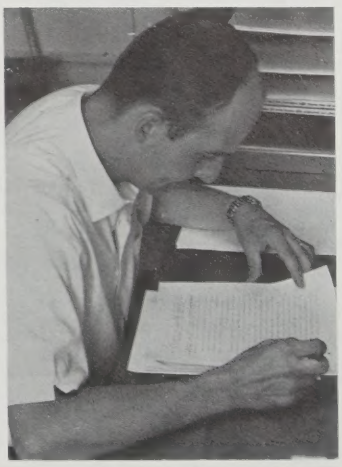
An eight-week seminar in international studies sponsored by the Council of Mennonite Colleges went to El Salvador this summer. Dr. Willard Smith, professor of history, and Mrs. Smith, assistant professor of Spanish, led the class on its overland tour from Goshen to El Salvador and back again.

People come to Goshen from many places, including Europe, to use the Mennonite Historical Library. The world's largest collection of books and documents on Anabaptist and Mennonite history is located here. John Lapp, a member of the faculty of Eastern Mennonite College, spent a large part of the summer at Goshen studying the history of the American Mennonite Mission in India.



Seminary summer school was held in conjunction with the Mennonite Biblical Seminary at Elkhart. President Erland Waltner of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary taught this class on the Petrine Epistles.

Several Goshen professors are working on their doctoral dissertations this summer. Richard Camp, assistant professor of history, is finishing his dissertation this summer.



Ten New Members Join Faculty

Ten persons have accepted full-time appointments to the faculties of the College and Seminary beginning this fall. Five others already associated with the College on a part-time basis will join the faculty on a full-time basis.

A. DON AUGSBURGER will be assistant to the dean of the Seminary and associate professor of Christian education. He formerly taught in Pennsylvania and Ohio public schools and was pastor to students and professor of Christian education at Eastern Mennonite College. Augsburger is a candidate for the Ed.D. degree at Temple University.

ALFRED J. ALBRECHT will be associate professor of speech. He graduated from Goshen, received an M.S. from Purdue and is presently working on his Ph.D. at Indiana Univ. He has taught English in Indiana high schools and at the University of Vermont. He has served as instructor of speech and parliamentary procedure for various labor union groups.

J. DANIEL HESS will be assistant professor of English. He graduated from Eastern Mennonite College and is a candidate for the Ph.D. at Syracuse University. He has been an administrative assistant at the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities and also a free-lance writer for church and professional publications.

JOHN ZOOK will be admissions and personnel counselor. He taught in the Goshen school system for one year following a three-year MCC assignment in Korea. He is a graduate of Goshen College.

MERLE E. JACOBS will be research professor in zoology. He will continue a project in physiological genetics under a National Institutes of Health grant. He is a Goshen graduate and holds a Ph.D. from Indiana University. He has taught at Goshen College, Duke Univ., Bethany College (W. Va.) and Eastern Mennonite College.

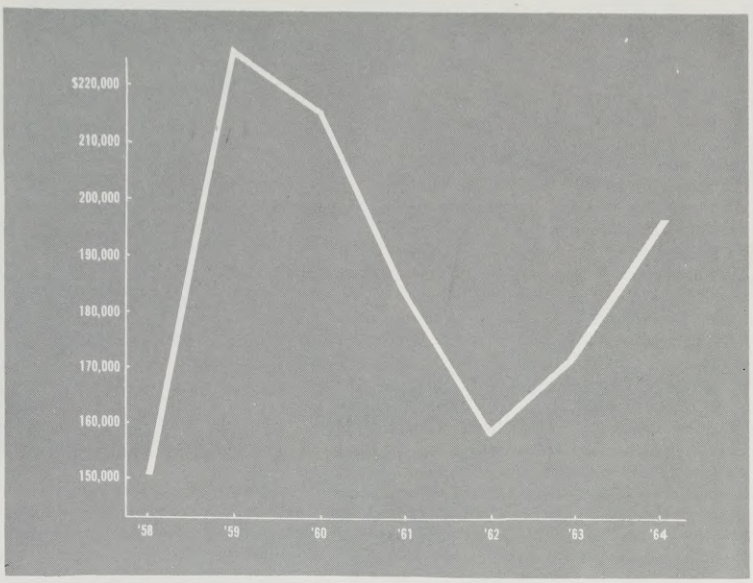
ALBERT ISAAK will be assistant professor of biology. Graduated from Tabor College in 1959, he attended Kansas State University, where he is a candidate for the Ph.D. degree.

JOHN D. INGOLD will be assistant professor of physical education. He graduated from Goshen and took his master's degree at the University of Illinois. He has taught and coached at Accra Academy, Accra, Ghana and at Bethany Christian High School.

ANNA MAE EBY will be instructor in nursing. She has served in both Haiti and the United States as a nurse and supervisor She is currently studying at Wayne State University.

WILBUR J. BIRKY will be instructor in English. He graduated from Goshen last year and completed work for his master's degree at the State University of Iowa this summer.

Part-time persons moving to a full-time faculty status are: Mrs. Mary Imhoff, Roseyn Rychener, and Helen Slabaugh in the personnel department; Byron S. Shenk in the physical education department; and Victor Vogt in the English department. Edward Stoltzfus will join the faculty this fall as pastor to students, as announced in the last issue of the Bulletin.



Contributed Support: Up

Contributed support from church and alumni increased from $172,621 to $196,329 for the fiscal year ended June 30. Much of the increase resulted from the excellent response of alumni to the Alumni Faculty Fund. Gifts from churches of Goshen's primary five conference constituency, including contributions of alumni members, were up 9% from $123,155 to $139,498. Average per member giving was $4.13. Illinois Conference giving was the highest, with an average of $7.17 per member.

The suggested quota is $10 per member per year for the building and operating needs of the college, and $2 for Seminary operations.

'65 Mission Board Meeting Here

The 1965 annual meeting of the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities will be held on the Goshen College campus. According to John Mosemann, pastor of the College Mennonite Church and president of the Mission Board, the conference will meet June 17 to 20.

Goshen College is working with the Indiana-Michigan district mission board in making arrangements to accommodate the conference on campus.

Wenger Publishes Eleventh Book

Dr. J. C. Wenger, professor of Bible and philosophy, is the editor of a book published this summer by Herald Press. The book, They Met God is an anthology of personal accounts of God's presence and leading in the lives of 33 Christians.

Six of the writers are Goshen College faculty members or students. They are President Mininger; Dr. J. C. Wenger; Dr. John Oyer, professor of history; Dr. Walter E. Yoder, professor emeritus of music; J. D. Graber, assistant professor of missions; and Yorifuma Yaguchi, a seminary student.

Many of the others have been former students at Goshen. They include evangelists and pastors, poets and editors, farmers, railroaders and businessmen, physicians and housewives, etc. They come from four continents and a variety of social backgrounds. All are presently members of the Mennonite church.

They Met God is the 11th book Professor Wenger has written or edited. He has been on the faculty of Goshen College and the Goshen Biblical Seminary since 1938. During the coming school year he will be on sabbatical leave.

Dr. O. R. Yoder '16 Winds Up Forty Memorable Years

John C. Manning, columnist for the Detroit Free Press, featured Dr. Orus R. Yoder '16 in his column last June 30.

He writes, "Michigan's most important medical executive is retiring from his 40-year-old state office this week. He is Dr. Orus R. Yoder, superintendent of Ypsilanti State Hospital.

"This reporter . . . is certain that he never knew a more brilliantly successful specialist than Dr. Yoder, who for so many years has ruled Michigan's largest and most successful mental hospital."

One of Dr. Yoder's most impressive virtues, he said, is that he could "pacify the hopelessly discouraged relatives" of the mental patient, as well as help to improve the patient's condition.

The article was spotted by C. L. Graber '28.

Harold Cross '60 Studies Holmes County Amish And Mental Retardation

Harold E. Cross, M.D., '60, now in the Ph.D. program in human genetics at Johns Hopkins University, writes, "I am studying mental retardation among the Holmes County, Ohio, group with emphasis on the genetics of inherited neurologic disorders. I am attempting to identify all possible cases with complete studies to allow full characterization of the defects involved, hoping thereby to be able to identify 'new syndromes' and to extend our knowledge of the inheritance of neurologic disorders. This type of medical research is then used to provide the foundation for later research on prevention and cures of diseases."

Dr. Cross' study is similar to another done at Johns Hopkins, featured in the New York Times. Geneticists have been studying the passage of individual genes through the Old Order Amish in Lancaster County, Pa., from the middle seventeen hundreds to the present.

Striking is the story of Samuel King, who came to America in 1742, and his wife, either of whom might have carried a dangerous gene. When two recessive genes—producing bad effects only when inherited from both parents—are inherited, as what happened when Mr. King's descendants intermarried, a rare kind of dwarfism results. In addition to being of short stature—40 to 80 inches tall—the person also has an extra finger on each hand and, in some cases, a serious malformation of the heart.

Special Interest Meetings Highlight Goshen's 1964 Homecoming

Nurses, home management alumnae, teacher education alumni, social workers, and graduate students can visit and renew acquaintances in specially arranged small group sessions on Thanksgiving afternoon, November 26, during Goshen's 1964 Annual Homecoming.

The interest groups replace the after-dinner meeting held in the past. This year Homecomers' wishes for a longer time Thanksgiving afternoon to talk to former classmates and professors will come true.

Pres. Mininger Opens 1964 Homecoming with Thanksgiving Sermon

Activities of Goshen's 1964 Annual Homecoming will begin with the Thanksgiving service on November 26 at 10:30 a.m. in the Church-Chapel. Pres. Paul E. Mininger '34 will preach the sermon; presiding will be S. A. Yoder '28.

The Homecoming Dinner, according to Phyllis Roose '46, will be served from 12:00 to 1:00 p.m. in the Alumni Memorial Dining Hall. Tickets will be available at the door.

Interest Groups in Afternoon

Alumni groups will meet from 2:00 to 4:00 p.m. on campus or in homes of faculty members, to be announced in the program. Tours of Clayton Kratz Residence Hall for Men and Science Hall will be conducted from 3:00 to 5:00 p.m. Ezra S. Hershberger '34 says there will be a student art exhibit in the Union Lounge.

The evening meal will be served from 5:00 to 6:00 p.m. The traditional Homecoming Music Program, to be given by Goshen's department of music, will begin at 8:00 p.m. in Union Auditorium.

On Friday, November 27, Roy Umble '35 will speak in chapel at 9:00 a.m. Presiding will be Edward Stoltzfus '53; song leader will be James A. Miller '52.

Richard Miller, Tenor, in L-M

Friday at 8:00 p.m. Tenor Richard Miller, associate professor of singing at Oberlin Conservatory, will present the Homecoming Lecture-Music recital. He has appeared as leading tenor with the San Francisco Opera Company, the Los Angeles Season, the San Antonio Opera Festival and the Zurich Opera.

The athletic high light at Homecoming will be Saturday evening, November 28, in the Union Gymnasium. The Maple Leafs will play Bethel College from Mishawaka, Ind., in varsity basketball.

John H. Yoder '47 is arranging the graduate students' fellowship. Orpah B. Mosemann will plan for the nurses; Edna P. Shantz '48, for the home management alumnae; Karl Massanari '36, for the teacher education alumni; and Lester Glick '49, for the social workers.

Other groups of alumni may also meet, says S. A. Yoder '28, chairman of the Homecoming Committee, and he and John Liechty '42, director of alumni relations, will find and announce the places. The meetings will begin at 2:00 p.m. and can close as the groups wish. Persons wanting to form other interest groups should write to John Liechty promptly; he will make arrangements and announce the meeting places in the program.

Homecomers to Tour New Clayton Kratz Hall

Lee Yoder '61, head resident of Clayton Kratz Residence Hall for Men, says the new 132-man dormitory will be open for public inspection from 3:00 to 5:00 p.m. Thanksgiving Day. He and Russel Liechty '53, dean of men, will make sure men are on hand to show Homecomers the public lounge, the recreation room, the men's lounge, and the rooms.

Susan Troyer '66, vice president of the Women's House Government Association, is arranging for serving light refreshments to Homecomers who might need a snack after Phyllis Roose's '46 Thanksgiving dinner.

Science Hall Also Open

The newly remodeled Science Hall will also be open Thanksgiving afternoon from 3:00 to 5:00, says J. Robert Kreider '41. He and Science Club members are arranging for guides, who will show Homecomers the new laboratories, classrooms, and offices.

Says J. Robert Kreider, "Neither Kratz nor Science halls have been opened for public inspection yet. so our 1964 Homecomers will be the first to see them."

Mary Kay Gerber '60 Sings With 1958 Goshen L-M Performer

Mary Kay Gerber '60, on her way home last January after three years of teaching music at Woodstock School, India, stopped off in Vienna. By the end of March she had performed twice with an amateur choir in Vienna. After the last concert she almost missed the last streetcar to her student hostel.

Fortunately she didn't. For there she met a part-time member of the Vienna Academy Chamber Choir, which sang in a Lecture-Music number at Goshen College in 1958. After an audition with the director, Dr. Xavier Meyer, a former conductor of the Vienna Choir Boys, she got the job on Good Friday, 1964.

"During the next two weeks," she writes, "we had heavy rehearsals, two concerts, and a TV job. Then I contracted hepatitis and was in the hospital 19 days, meanwhile learning all the music in German, Latin, Italian, and Austrian dialect by myself in the hospital. Saturday noon I got out of the hospital and Monday morning the Choir flew to Cairo. Although I didn't sing the first 11 days, I performed consistently from then on and have had no bad reaction!"

The choir has 24 members. Most are Austrians, but Greece, Switzerland, the Philippines, and the United States are also represented. Although all the members have studied or are presently studying voice at the Academy, their occupations range from geneticist to goldsmith, kindergarten teacher to dress designer.

The concerts consist of sacred music from the classical masters (Bach, Palestrina, Mozart, and Bruckner), modern sacred and secular music, romantic music, and Austrian folk songs. Most of the music is sung a cappella.

The tour last year began in Cairo, continued on to Bombay, Bangkok, Hong Kong, Japan, Formosa, Manila, New Delhi, Karachi, Teheran, Beirut, and Athens.

Mary Kay writes, "After working for a few months in the States I am going back to Vienna and will sing with the choir next year."

Gingerich Compares Computer and Man

Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory scientist Dr. Owen Gingerich '51 set up a demonstration to show that "a computer can calculate more in a day than man in a lifetime." He chose for an example Kepler's attempts to fit a circular orbit to observed positions of the planet Mars. The June number of the American Scientist published his report, "The Computer Versus Kepler."

Using tedious trial and error, Kepler made 70 tries before achieving a satisfactory result. Dr. Gingerich adopted the same procedure for his computer program, but to his astonishment the computer needed only nine trials to reach a similar result.

The problem took 17th century astronomer Johannes Kepler nearly two years to solve. Dr. Gingerich worked about a week preparing the procedure for the IBM 7094 computer at Harvard University, and 12.4 minutes of machine time "debugging" the computer program. The computer needed only eight seconds more to get the results.

For High School Seniors-- Campus Open House

John M. Zook '56, admissions counselor at Goshen College, announces a Campus Open House for high school seniors over Thanksgiving weekend, Nov. 27-29. Seniors will be guests of Goshen College for meals and lodging.

Friday afternoon they will visit college classes and take a tour of the campus. That evening they will attend the Lecture-Music recital of Richard Miller, nationally known tenor. Afterward, college students will host them at a special party.

Saturday morning future nurses will take part in "Nurse for a Day" at Elkhart General Hospital. Others will meet with teachers in their areas of interest and then take part in College Planning, where they will learn more about courses, costs, and scholarships.

Saturday afternoon boys interested in athletics will meet with Head Coach Harold Yoder and the Maple Leaf basketball team in a locker room session. That evening the weekenders will see the Maple Leafs play Bethel College (Mishawaka).

Sunday they will attend morning worship at the College Church. Open House weekend ends with Sunday dinner.

For more information, write to John M. Zook, Admissions Office, Goshen College, Goshen, Ind. 46526.

Alumni Elect Four To Board

Alumni elected four new members to the board of the Almuni Association of Goshen College at its June 1 meeting. Two of these were elected to the executive committee of the board.

Elected to the board were:

Ronald B. Schertz '58, Metamora, Ill.; Dr. Stanley J. Strycker '53, Midland, Mich.; Dr. Myrl A. Nafziger '50, Wadsworth, Ohio; Mrs. Anne Krabill Hershberger '58, Bloomington, Ind. Allen J. Stuckey '64, Cincinnati, Ohio, was elected to the board by the class of '64.

The board elected Ronald B. Schertz president; Frank Ulrich '55, vice-president; Mrs. Anne Krabill Hershberger, fifth member. Other members on the executive committee are Dr. Donald G. Miller '50, past president, and J. Robert Kreider '41, secretary-treasurer.

Ronald B. Schertz is presently an officer of the Metamora National Bank. His wife, the former Leanne Fricke '58, says, "He spends evenings and other spare time working on church music proects." In college Ronald majored in economics.

Stanley J. Strycker is a research chemist in the organic synthesis section of the bioproducts department at Dow Chemical Company, Midland, Mich. He received his Ph.D. degree in organic chemistry at the University of Illinois in 1956. He is co-author of two United States and two foreign patents and has also contributed articles to professional journals. This summer he worked at Dow's western division research laboratories at Walnut Creek, California. He and his family took a leisurely trip via Grand Canyon, Zion Park, Hoover Dam, and Sequoia Park. They returned to Midland the last part of August.

Dr. Myrl A. Nafziger is a pediatrician in Wadsworth, Ohio. His wife is the former Twila J. Hostetler '50.

Mrs. Anne Krabill Hershberger is teaching home nursing in the division of nursing at Indiana University this year, where husband Abner '60 is working on his masters degree. She received her M.S. degree in nursing from Wayne State University in 1962 and taught at Goshen College two years.

Allen J. Stuckey, formerly from Archbold, Ohio, is studying medicine this year at the University of Cincinnati. He was a natural science major at Goshen College.

(I hope to tell you more about these persons and print short letters from them in future issues.—Ed.)

Parents of freshmen at Goshen College will soon receive invitations to attend the 16th annual Freshman Parents Weekend. Saturday and Sunday, November 14 and 15, says Atlee Beechy '35, dean of students.

Parents will be guests of Goshen College at dinner Saturday evening and may take part in a question-and-answer period with President Mininger '34 and also in an informal program for freshmen and their parents. They may also talk to faculty members, who appreciate learning to know the parents of their students.

Dean Beechy says that the purpose of the weekend is to encourage parents of freshmen to visit their sons and daughters, to give them the chance to share their hopes and concerns to the college faculty and administration and to get acquainted with other parents, and to give Goshen College a chance to interpret its goals, hopes, and program.

Five-Year Program to Ready Goshen for More Students

President Paul E. Mininger announced Goshen's 75th Anniversary Development Program on October 19. The five-year program will lead up to 1969 when Goshen will celebrate the 75th anniversary of its founding.

Goshen's Board of Overseers recommended the program to the Mennonite Board of Education, which met October 16 and 17 in its annual meeting at Hesston, Kans. Briefly, the program will mean three new buildings — a million-dollar library (see story inside) and two new residence halls, one for men and one for women — other capital improvements, and funds for current operations, research, and endowment.

The purpose of Goshen's 75th Anniversary Development Program is to enable Goshen to continue to serve increasing numbers of students from the Mennonite Church, its alumni, and from its other constituencies.

During the past ten years Goshen has grown from 547 full-time students in the fall of 1954-55, to the 912 students enrolled this fall. This is an increase of 365 students, or 67 per cent, in 10 years — the longest period of sustained rapid growth of student enrollment in Goshen's history.

The past increase in attendance was due almost entirely to increases in the percentage of college age young persons attending college. Even though there have been significant increases in the number and percentage of college age youth attending college in the past 20 years, there are many indications that the number of college students will increase even more rapidly in the next ten. For in the next ten, Goshen will begin to accept students who made up the increase in the birth rate that began immediately after the Second World War.

The first of the "war babies" were born in 1946 and were graduated from high school in 1964. Population studies show that there are 20 per cent more 18-year-olds in the nation in 1964 than there were in 1963, and they predict an additional 12 per cent increase in the number in 1965 and a plateau at this high level through 1970.

In the Mennonite Church the number of 18-year-olds increased by 13 per cent in 1964. This number will not increase significantly in 1965, but will then increase each year over the previous year, through 1970.

GOSHEN DOING LONG-RANGE PLANNING

It is for these young persons — those who will be attending Goshen within the next two to 20 years — that Goshen is now doing long-range planning and making an intensive effort to secure resources.

This type of long-range planning has gone hand in hand with Goshen's growth since its founding. Had it not been for the good leadership of past presidents and administrations, and of the sacrifice, interest, hard work, and faith of many persons, Goshen's present campus and its buildings would not be adequate for the 912 full-time students this fall.

Because Goshen sees no letup ahead in the growth of student enrollment, owing to the predictions made by reliable authorities — the United States Government and church-wide surveys — it has now become clear that growth in the next five years will need to be accomplished twice as fast as in the past seven.

MORE FOR CURRENT OPERATIONS

Accommodating more students means more than a library, two new residence halls (one for at least 100 women and to be ready by the fall of 1967, and one for 132 men, to be ready by the fall of 1969), improvements in the dining hall to serve more students more efficiently, renovating the old library and Coffman and Kulp residence halls for women, enlarging the Union snack shop, bookstore, and lounge area, and other campus improvements.

It also means more money for current operations. The tuition the student pays at Goshen covers only 79 per cent of the costs of his instruction.

By some standards this may be high. For example, at state colleges and universities, the student pays in tuition only 20 to 25 per cent of the costs; state taxes subsidize his education. At wealthy private schools the student pays approximately 50 per cent; the rest is paid from contributions to the school and income from the school's endowment.

But Goshen, neither state-controlled nor wealthy, wants to continue to hold the line against asking its students to pay excessive tuition fees. "Goshen's annual inclusive fee of $1550 for full-time students," Pres. Mininger reported to the Mennonite Board of Education last month, "is less than comparable fees in most other accredited private colleges in our geographical region. Our inclusive fee approximates comparable costs for board, room, tuition, and fees in most public colleges and universities in the states of our primary constituency," meaning Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and the province of Ontario.

Holding this line in the future means Goshen must secure contributed funds not only for capital purposes, but also for current operations. Of the 3½ million dollars, over one-fourth, or $885,000, will be used for current operations. This includes $150,000 for scholarships and student aid, $475,000 for hiring more teachers and improving their teaching through a system of sabbaticals and leaves, $50,000 for library accessions, and $215,000 for new equipment, renovation, and contingencies.

And $300,000, not quite one tenth of the total five-year program, will go toward endowment that is being built up slowly yet regularly.

GOSHEN DEPENDING ON CHURCH AND ALUMNI

Goshen is depending on the Mennonite Church and alumni, both of whom have responded well in the past, to continue their support.

Church members and alumni are invited to visit Goshen's developing campus and get firsthand knowledge of how Goshen is planning today to meet tomorrow's demands for more and better opportunities in higher education.

Goshen's Proposed Library:
The Emphasis Is on Serious, Private Study

From a dean's point of view, it is very clear that college instruction is different from that in high school. And the function of the library is different.

Says Goshen Dean Carl Kreider, "In high school we expect the student to learn very much from the classroom. His course may meet five times a week. He takes four or five courses a semester. Most of his time he spends sitting in class, and out of class, he spends time reading the textbook.

"But in college the situation is different. There the student is out of class most of the time, and his study outside of class is of major importance. We expect students to study two hours out of class for each hour in class. And the tendency in higher education is to emphasize more independent study outside of class and de-emphasize class meetings."

TO EMPHASIZE INDEPENDENT STUDY

"We at Goshen expect to follow this trend. The concept of student responsibility for his education has greatly expanded, and will continue to grow as we, and teachers at other colleges, emphasize independent study.

"For example, by 1970 the typical three-hour course may meet only two hours a week instead of three hours, as it does today. The study college persons will be required to do then will place more strain on the library's services as well as on the student's creativity to find the materials and study them.

"Textbooks are important in college. But in the future they will become less important, and library materials will become more important."

But the fact that a college should have a library goes even deeper.

"The purpose," says Dean Kreider, "of a college education is to prepare for continuing study throughout life. Knowledge is growing so rapidly that anyone who stops learning when he leaves Goshen, or any college, will be up to date when he graduates, but soon out of date afterward.

"We at Goshen want to teach our students both how to do independent study and how to appreciate its value. We want to prepare them for the long pull ahead — over the next fifty to sixty years — and not just for a few years after graduation."

A TEACHER'S LIBRARY

Beside students, the faculty will make use of a college library.

Says Dean Kreider, "The library gives each teacher a chance to keep up in his field. Because of the rapid changes in every field, it is more economical for the library to buy books for faculty and students to use, rather than ask them to build up their personal libraries.

"Too, we expect faculty members to engage in some research. The facilities of a library are necessary to the teacher to find out what has already been done in his area. For example, Dr. Willard H. Smith, of our department of history, is doing research on William Jennings Bryan. Our library bought New York Times microfilms to help him; these microfilms will also be available to seniors doing theses.

"The alternative would have been for Dr. Smith to buy these for his personal library, but this would have restricted their use severely."

The resources of Goshen College's library will enrich those of the community. Dean Kreider reports, "We had a meeting of all local librarians and chairmen of library boards to discuss sharing our resources in Elkhart County. We concluded we cannot all build up our libraries in all areas, merely because of expense involved, but we did learn of each other's special facilities."

LIBRARIAN JAMES CLEMENS SPEAKS

Goshen librarian James Clemens concurs with what Dean Kreider says. Says Mr. Clemens:

"I believe the library is a very important and major arm of instruction. And because it is, it should be at the geographic center of campus, not only because it is easy to get to from all parts of the campus, but also to symbolize that it is important to all parts of the campus community — students, teachers, and administrators."

Tracing the growth of the use of libraries, Mr. Clemens says, "After the Second World War college teachers began to quit using college textbooks and started to require readings from several books. This one event changed the focus of the library from a collection of books that stored all the knowledge to the concept that a library should be a unit of function — a collection of books that is to be used.

"Today, I look to the library to provide books, journals, and other instructional materials to support the whole academic program of the college. Just as important, I look to the library to encourage each student — each person that enters its doors — to form a life-long habit of reading much and reading well. If the college library does not show persons how to read anything but the Saturday Evening Post and other popular magazines, the library and the college have failed miserably. On the other hand, if the library has performed well, the student's reading habits will enrich his whole life and make him a more valuable member of society, his church, and his family.

"The library will never be obsolete, as I see it," says Mr. Clemens. "As long as most of our culture is transmitted from generation to generation by books, there will always be libraries to store them.

"Most of the leaders in the college library field do not see the book being replaced by push-button teaching machines, pictures, or tapes. The latter are elusive; books are permanent. Today's conveniences — microfilm and print viewers, for example — are mainly space-saving."

LIBRARY IS NEEDED NOW

Goshen needs a library now. The present library can hardly function — staff persons are working in crowded quarters, readers must study in a large reading room where there are distractions from opening and closing books and persons entering and leaving, and shelves are crowded. Books removed to branch libraries — for instance, to the school of nursing and department of home economics — will return to the main collection in the proposed library.

"Deficiencies," says Mr. Clemens, "will be taken care of in the new library. Instead of a large reading room, reading areas will be among the shelves. The idea is to get students and books together, not to keep students in one large reading room and separated from the books.

"And individual carrels will make study more conducive than now when a student must share a table with seven others.

"We will have adequate space for staff persons. Library officials tell us that staff space usually becomes the first bottleneck. The staff persons need adequate space to prepare the books for the shelves, to catalog them, and to control them."

Goshen has designed its library, keeping all main requirements in mind. The new library will have a pleasant atmosphere where private study can go on; students no longer will need to search for nooks and crannies — quiet, secluded places — to study. It will be quiet and well-lighted.

And the proposed library will have the books needed for college reading as well as for plus-reading. For it is in the library where the student kindles his imagination, lengthens his perspective, where the quiet, continuous process of self-education goes on.

Goshen's Student Enrollment And Library Services Grow Together

When Goshen moves its library from the present Main Street location to the center of campus — between the Church-Chapel and Arts Building — it will be the fourth time in its history the books have been moved to a larger, more commodious place.

Nelson P. Springer, curator of the Mennonite Historical Library, says Goshen's first library was in North Hall, known in 1903 as East Hall and situated where Coffman Residence Hall for Women now stands.

Around January 30, 1904, the library was moved to the south end of the first floor of the Administration Building. By 1910 it was using the entire east half of the first floor. By 1934 the book collection was overflowing to the ground floor of the Administration Building; the book stacks were moved to the room later known as Adelphian Hall on the ground floor. (Adelphian Hall, in the meantime, has been renovated as a typing and shorthand classroom.)

THIRD MOVE TO MEMORIAL LIBRARY

In 1940 the book collection was moved to Goshen's present Memorial Library. Then, as now, a good library building was most urgent. The story, 25 years ago, could almost be the same today, with only the budget, volume, and periodicals statistics changed. Today this same library, built to accommodate 134 readers, serves 912 full-time students — a contrast to the 252 full-time students in the fall of 1940.

"The library is becoming increasingly important in the educational program of the modern liberal arts college," according to the brochure in 1938. "It has long since ceased to be primarily a storehouse for books, and has become a service building where faculty and students may find tools for effective learning, teaching, and research. To serve its function the library must have an adequate physical plant, sufficiently large holdings of books and periodicals in its general and reference collection to serve its educational program, and a trained staff capable of matching the teaching program of the faculty with adequate library service.

"Goshen College must meet all three of the above requirements as quickly as possible in terms of service to a student body of 300, with a program which has three major objectives, namely, a general liberal arts education, preparation for the teaching profession, and preparation for Christian service. The trained staff is already provided with two full-time librarians aided by student assistants. The holdings and service are being expanded with a minimum budget of $2,000 per year, which must be enlarged as rapidly as finances permit. Present holdings consist of approximately 15,000 volumes of books and bound periodicals, with over 200 periodicals currently received . . ."

SPACE FOR ONE-THIRD OF STUDENT BODY

Then, as today, the best library practice calls for reading space for one-third of the maximum student body. Goshen presently plans for a library that will accommodate 600 at one time, with 450 of the readers at individual carrels. This means Goshen could accommodate one-half of its 1964-65 students — full-time and part-time — at one time in the new library.

Goshen's enrollment can grow to 1800 students and its library service will still be within good practice. This student body is not out of reasonable sight; by the fall of 1972 Pres. Mininger predicts 1370 full-time students; if trends continue, another 270 to 340 will be part-time students, bringing total enrollment within a hundred of the 1800 students.

In 1940 librarians believed a good small college library should have holdings of at least 50,000 volumes with a subscription list of 300 periodicals. But in 1940 Goshen had only 15,000 volumes.

Since then, owing to the knowledge explosion and along with it the rapid production of books, Goshen's holdings have more than quadrupled; Goshen now has 83,500 volumes in its collection. Of these, 26,000 volumes, at a cost of $76,000, were added in the past five years. With a look to the future, Goshen is planning its new library to have a book capacity of 240,000 volumes.

With periodicals it is the same story. In 1940 Goshen received just slightly more than 200 current periodicals. Today the number has more than tripled. Goshen presently receives 765.

BUDGET ALSO INCREASED

The library budget has also increased. Twenty-five years ago the library operated on $2,000. Today, the library's annual operating budget is $73,000; budgeted for the purchase of new books is $13,750, for periodicals and journals, $2,560. This fall 11 student assistants work in the library, open 86 hours a week.

Beside using its own resources, Goshen College has also been grateful for several grants, many of them from persons in the Mennonite Church who have donated all or parts of their personal libraries.

In addition, Lilly Endowment granted $3,000 in 1957 to help build book and periodical holdings in ten subject areas. A year later, $4,000 of a $19,000 Lilly Endowment Theological Workshop Grant was earmarked for building the theology reference collection. In 1960 Lilly Endowment gave $20,000 to build and supplement the collection of reference and standard works in several subject areas.

The Association of College and Reference Librarians also made two $500 grants, one in 1955 and one in 1962. The first was used to purchase the complete works of J. S. Bach and the second to build the collection of church music. In 1962 the Kellogg Foundation gave Goshen $10,000 for books in teacher education and related areas.

Within the last 24 years microfilm has become a popular, space-saving way of storing knowledge. Today, Goshen has 410 microfilms in its collection, but there is little space for equipment and readers to study them. Many of the microfilms are photographic reproductions of rare books and of significant archival material bearing on Mennonite history, in Europe and America.

NEW LIBRARY TO BE FIREPROOF

Like the one before it, Goshen's new library will be fireproof throughout. Bookstacks will be self-contained steel and concrete units with steel shelving. In addition, the new library will have humidity and temperature control because librarians have found that paper used in most recent books is not nearly as good as the paper used two or three centuries earlier. To keep costs down, publishers today use cheaper papers instead of the more expensive handmade papers used two or three hundred years ago. Most of today's papers yellow and deteriorate after a few years if temperature and humidity are not kept constant.

Since 1903 Goshen's library has been available to pastors, alumni, and other persons in Northern Indiana. They may read current periodicals in the reading room and use reference books. They may freely check out books and older periodicals not on reserve for students. Goshen plans to follow this tradition and to allow room in its new library to serve these persons, as well as its students, because it believes that learning never stops for any person.

Goshen's proposed million-dollar library has been designed so that additions can be built on the east and south sides without harming it architecturally or aesthetically. The additions could more than double the 38,800 square-foot proposed building, to be finished by September, 1967. Long-range planning is necessary because Goshen may want to add other graduate curriculums in the future.

First floor plan of proposed library.

The Memorial Library was built in 1940.

Dean Carl Kreider and Librarian James Clemens check that individual carrels — with dividers 52 inches high — are in the plans for three-fourths of the 600 readers. Typing and faculty research rooms, both soundproofed, will also be situated near the book shelves.

Goshen's main reading room served the 252 full-time students in 1940, but its 134 seats are not adequate for the 912 full-time and 183 part-time students now. Good library practice calls for seats for one-third of the student body.

Students sometimes leave the main library and go to smaller branch libraries where there is less distraction. This person is studying in the home economics library.

Work space for technical processes — getting books and periodicals ready for circulation — is cramped in the present library. Adequate space has been allowed for persons to work efficiently in the proposed library.

Librarian James Clemens says, "Students hunt out nooks and crannies where they won't be bothered." This person is studying near the magazine stacks on the library's mezzanine floor.

Dean Carl Kreider toured last August from a year of teaching at Haile Selassie University in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. Dr. Kreider, who has a doctorate from the University of London School of Economics and Political Science, and had been dean of the college at Haile Selassie University, was on the faculty there.

Dr. Kurt Mannhardt, physician, returned to Nepal in 1962, he was one of seven who were sent by the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities to India.

Dr. Atlee Beechy, physician, was a Fulbright lecturer in Iran in 1962-63. Dr. Beechy, who has also taught in Pierce College, Athens, Greece, and Hebrew University, Jerusalem, Israel, has been a visiting professor at Goshen College in Greece. He has also taught in Germany, and the Netherlands.

From 1945 to 1964, when Elkhart Institute moved to Goshen, the full-time enrollment increased from 35 to 300—an increase of 400 students. In those 19 years Goshen built the buildings and completely renovated another.

Pres. Mininger, in his report to the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities, stated that Goshen is likely to experience a growth in part-time students by 1970. Pres. Mininger announced that the College will need to build the proposed $1,000,000 library, a new science building, a dormitory, and an addition to the present gymnasium, and to other major renovations.

The proposed land of these capital improvements in the next five years will cost $2,400,000, a half of Goshen's $5,400,000 capital expenditures in the last 19 years, which includes:

Nearly 20 personnel managers, families, and businessmen help Goshen students find work in the area. The Goshen College Aid Guild aims to open especially for students.

Wages for students at Goshen College and in the community vary, but are high enough for the student to help himself pay for his and the student's bills.

About one men work part-time in grocery and department stores, in the factories, in offices of the Elkhart and Goshen hospitals.

Some 20 to 25 men work on occasion in the farm industry. Farmers pay $1.25 to $1.50 per day and overnight for yard, general outside work, or by the hour for picking corn or beans.

In addition, some 15 men work in the College Dining Hall, helping in dishwashing, and as help farmers. A few men do janitorial work.

Girls generally do baby sitting and housework.

Goshen's Proposed Library:

The Emphasis Is on Serious, Private Study

From a dean's point of view, it is very clear that college instruction is different from that in high school. And the function of the library is different.

Says Goshen Dean Carl Kreider, "In high school we expect the student to learn very much from the classroom. His course may meet five times a week. He takes four or five courses a semester. Most of his time he spends sitting in class, and out of class, he spends time reading the textbook.

"But in college the situation is different. There the student is out of class most of the time, and his study outside of class is of major importance. We expect students to study two hours out of class for each hour in class. And the tendency in higher education is to emphasize more independent study outside of class and de-emphasize class meetings."

TO EMPHASIZE INDEPENDENT STUDY

"We at Goshen expect to follow this trend. The concept of student responsibility for his education has greatly expanded, and will continue to grow as we, and teachers at other colleges, emphasize independent study.

"For example, by 1970 the typical three-hour course may meet only two hours a week instead of three hours, as it does today. The study college persons will be required to do then will place more strain on the library's services as well as on the student's creativity to find the materials and study them.

"Textbooks are important in college. But in the future they will become less important, and library materials will become more important."

But the fact that a college should have a library goes even deeper.

"The purpose," says Dean Kreider, "of a college education is to prepare for continuing study throughout life. Knowledge is growing so rapidly that anyone who stops learning when he leaves Goshen, or any college, will be up to date when he graduates, but soon out of date afterward.

"We at Goshen want to teach our students both how to do independent study and how to appreciate its value. We want to prepare them for the long pull ahead — over the next fifty to sixty years — and not just for a few years after graduation."

A TEACHER'S LIBRARY

Beside students, the faculty will also use a college library.

Says Dean Kreider, "The library gives each teacher a chance to keep up in his field. Because of the rapid changes in every field, it is more economical for the library to buy books for faculty and students to use, rather than ask them to build up their personal libraries.

"Too, we expect faculty members to engage in some research. The facilities of a library are necessary to the teacher to find out what has already been done in his area. For example, Dr. Willard H. Smith, of our department of history, is doing research on William Jennings Bryan. Our library bought New York Times microfilms to help him; these microfilms will also be available to seniors doing theses.

"The alternative would have been for Dr. Smith to buy these for his personal library, but this would have restricted their use severely."

The resources of Goshen College's library will enrich those of the community. Dean Kreider reports, "We had a meeting of all local librarians and chairmen of library boards to discuss sharing our resources in Elkhart County. We concluded we cannot all build up our libraries in all areas, merely because of expense involved, but we did learn of each other's special facilities."

LIBRARIAN JAMES CLEMENS SPEAKS

Goshen librarian James Clemens concurs with what Dean Kreider says. Says Mr. Clemens:

"I believe the library is a very important and major arm of instruction. And because it is, it should be at the geographic center of campus, not only because it is easy to get to from all parts of the campus, but also to symbolize that it is important to all parts of the campus community — students, teachers, and administrators."

Tracing the growth of the use of libraries, Mr. Clemens says, "After the Second World War college teachers began to quit using college textbooks and started to require readings from several books. This one event changed the focus of the library from a collection of books that stored all the knowledge to the concept that a library should be a unit of function — a collection of books that is to be used.

"Today, I look to the library to provide books, journals, and other instructional materials to support the whole academic program of the college. Just as important, I look to the library to encourage each student — each person that enters its doors — to form a life-long habit of reading much and reading well. If the college library does not show persons how to read anything but the Saturday Evening Post and other popular magazines, the library and the college have failed miserably. On the other hand, if the library has performed well, the student's reading habits will enrich his whole life and make him a more valuable member of society, his church, and his family.

"The library will never be obsolete, as I see it," says Mr. Clemens. "As long as most of our culture is transmitted from generation to generation by books, there will always be libraries to store them.

"Most of the leaders in the college library field do not see the book being replaced by push-button teaching machines, pictures, or tapes. The latter are elusive; books are permanent. Today's conveniences — microfilm and print viewers, for example — are mainly space-saving."

LIBRARY IS NEEDED NOW

Goshen needs a library now. The present library can hardly function — staff persons are working in crowded quarters, readers must study in a large reading room where there are distractions from opening and closing books and persons entering and leaving, and shelves are crowded. Books removed to branch libraries — for instance, to the school of nursing and department of home economics — will return to the main collection in the proposed library.

"Deficiencies," says Mr. Clemens, "will be taken care of in the new library. Instead of a large reading room, reading areas will be among the shelves. The idea is to get students and books together, not to keep students in one large reading room and separated from the books.

"And individual carrels will make study more conducive than now when a student must share a table with seven others.

"We will have adequate space for staff persons. Library officials tell us that staff space usually becomes the first bottleneck. The staff persons need adequate space to prepare the books for the shelves, to catalog them, and to control them."

Goshen has designed its library, keeping all main requirements in mind. The new library will have a pleasant atmosphere where private study can go on; students no longer will need to search for nooks and crannies — quiet, secluded places — to study. It will be quiet and well-lighted.

And the proposed library will have the books needed for college reading as well as for plus-reading. For it is in the library where the student kindles his imagination, lengthens his perspective, where the quiet, continuous process of self-education goes on.

Goshen's proposed million-dollar library has b signed so that additions can be built on the east a sides without harming it architecturally or aesth The additions could more than double the 38,800 foot proposed building, to be finished by Septembe Long-range planning is necessary because Gosh want to add other graduate curriculums in the f

First Annual Fall Convocation For Freshman Parents Success

About 250 parents of Goshen's 264 freshmen made Goshen's first annual Freshman Parents' Fall Convocation a success, measured by any standard.

Saturday afternoon, September 12, the parents met on the lawn in front of the Arts Building for a half hour of greetings and introductions. About 150 were seated, and nearly that many were standing, including college teachers and officials, and more freshmen and their parents.

Presiding was Dr. Atlee Beechy, dean of students. Greeting the parents were Dr. Carl Kreider, dean, J. B. Shenk, director of admissions, Edward Stoltzfus, pastor to students, Ralph B. Schenk, mayor of Goshen, and John H. Mosemann, pastor of the College Mennonite Church. Song leader was Dr. Dwight Weldy, of the department of music.

Earlier, from one to four o'clock, new students and their families visited in Westlawn Lounge, where tea and punch were served. At 4:30 the parents met in Aurora Hall for another short meeting.

Goshen plans to make its Fall Convocation for Freshman Parents part of the same tradition that has brought freshman parents back to the campus in November for the last 16 years for Freshman Parents Weekend.

Erie J. Sauder Appointed To Board of Overseers

Erie J. Sauder, Archbold, Ohio, was appointed to Goshen's Board of Overseers by the Mennonite Board of Education at its meeting last month at Hesston.

He is president of Sauder Woodworking Company, which makes occasional furniture, president of Sauder Manufacturing Company, which makes church furniture, and president of Fore-Craft, Inc., maker of case goods.

An active layman in the Mennonite Church, he is president of the board of Sunshine Children's Home, a member of the board of Oaklawn Psychiatric Center, secretary of the Mennonite Economic Development Association, and a member of the national Committee on Economic and Social Relations. He has been treasurer of the Ohio Mennonite Mission Board for nine years and an elder in the Tedrow Mennonite Church for three. Presently he is on the finance committee of the Tedrow Church.

He and Mrs. Sauder have three sons — Delmar, Maynard, and Myrl.

Mr. Sauder is the tenth member on Goshen's Board of Overseers. The other nine are:

Mrs. Alta Erb, Scottdale, Pa.; C. L. Graber, Goshen, Ind.; Norman High, Kitchener, Ont.; Charles Hoeflich, Perkasie, Pa.; John Mosemann, Goshen, Ind.; Orrin J. Smucker, Plain City, Ohio; Dwight Yoder, Akron, Pa.; Howard Yoder, Wooster, Ohio; and Harold Zehr, Normal, Ill.

Maple Leafs Announce 64'—'65 Basketball

Coach Harold Yoder says Goshen's Maple Leafs varsity will take part in 15 basketball games this season. The first home game will be on Saturday, November 28, during Goshen's Homecoming.

The 1964-65 schedule is:

Nov. 21	Spring Arbor	Away
Nov. 28	Bethel (Mishawaka, Ind.)	Home
Dec. 4, 5	Taylor Tournament (Taylor, Huntington, Goshen, Cedarville)	Away
Dec. 12	Concordia	Home
Dec. 17	Manchester	Home
Jan. 7	Malone	Home
Jan. 9	Earlham	Away
Jan. 12	Anderson	Away
Jan. 16	Grace	Home
Jan. 18	Bluffton	Home
Jan. 23	Defiance	Away
Jan. 30	Huntington	Away
Feb. 6	Huntington	Home
Feb. 16	Grace	Away
Feb. 20	Bethel	Away

Goshen hopes to top last year's record of 10 victories out of 15 games. Last season the Maple Leafs were rated the second leading independent team in Indiana. They averaged 97.73 points a game.

Fall Enrollment Up 6.6%

Goshen's full-time student enrollment increased 6.6 per cent this year — 57 over last year's fall enrollment of 855.

Freshmen number 264, 19 more than last year, an increase of 7.8 per cent. Sophomores number 211, also 19 more than last year. The only class with less — the juniors — dropped to 210 from last year's 232. There are 38 more seniors and three more postgraduates this year than first semester last year.

There are 31 more part-time students at Goshen this fall than last year, or a total of 183.

In Goshen College Biblical Seminary there are 40 full-time and 15 part-time students, a total of 55, two less than first semester last year.

The grand total is 1,150 students at Goshen, as contrasted to last fall's 1,064.

CORRECTION: Dates for the 59th Annual Meeting of the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities, to be at Goshen College, are June 24-27, 1965, not June 17-20 as listed in the last Bulletin. — Ed.

New Pamphlets Ready For Prospective Goshen Students

John M. Zook and Leland K. Weldy, Goshen's admissions counselors, now halfway through this year's itineraries visiting high school juniors and seniors, their counselors and parents, began introducing last month nine new pieces in Goshen's Pre-College Guidance Series:

Art, Physical Education, Music, Church Vocations, Teacher Education, College Is Coming, Science, "Follow Me . . . ," about the Goshen College Biblical Seminary and a general folder, "Goshen College."

Three of the other folders in the series are on nursing, how to apply for admission, and how to pay for a college education.

Mr. Zook's and Mr. Weldy's itineraries for the rest of the season are:

Nov. 30 - Dec. 4	Meadville, Pa.; Clarence Center and Lowville, N. Y.	John M. Zook
Dec. 7-11	Arthur, Fisher, Gibson City, and Champaign, Ill.	Leland K. Weldy
Dec. 14-18	Scottdale, Johnstown, Belleville, and Springs, Pa.	John M. Zook
Jan. 11-15	Wayne County, Wadsworth, Louisville, Hartville, and Columbiana, Ohio	John M. Zook
Jan. 11-15	Midland, Pigeon, St. Johns, and White Cloud, Mich.	Leland K. Weldy
Feb. 1-5	Kalona, Wellman, and Wayland, Iowa	Leland K. Weldy

They have already visited Montgomery, Ind.; Fairview, Mich.; Elida, Lima, Mt. Gilead, West Liberty, Plain City, Columbus, Archbold, and Holmes County, Ohio; Eastern Pennsylvania; Sterling, Freeport, Chicago, and Central Illinois.

Young persons interested in attending Goshen and wanting a copy of any of the folders are invited to write to Admissions Counselor, Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana 46526.

Elkhart County Leaders Organize To Help Goshen College

Charles W. Ainlay, Goshen attorney at law, and chairman of Goshen's President's Advisory Board, and Basil Turner, president of the CTS Corporation, Elkhart, are co-chairmen of the 1964 Elkhart County Annual Giving Program for Goshen College Development.

The two men have recruited 18 other community leaders, who in turn asked 80 others to help in the fund-raising effort.

The program, launched October 19, the day Goshen announced its 75th Anniversary Development Program, will enable Goshen College to offer better opportunities in higher education to increasing numbers of young men and women. The campaign will close December 1.

Both Mr. Ainlay and Mr. Turner are well suited for their tasks as co-chairmen of the community effort. Mr. Ainlay, a Goshen graduate, is an active layman in the Lutheran church. Mr. Turner, also a member of Goshen's President's Advisory Board, is active in the Methodist church.

$75,000 Is Goal for '64-'65 Alumni Fund

For Second Year Money Will Go for Faculty Sabbaticals and Retirement

The executive committee of the Alumni Association of Goshen College approved a $75,000 goal for 1964-65 alumni annual giving at its October 31 meeting at Goshen.

The money will go to the popular Alumni Faculty Fund that received $49,603.47 last year.

Alumni officers: Liechty, Ulrich, Mrs. Hershberger, Schertz. Not present, Dr. D. G. Miller.

The Fund is an important part in Goshen College's 75th Anniversary Development Program. It provides for retirement for teachers who accepted low salaries and gave a lifetime of service at Goshen. And it provides for sabbaticals—time away from campus every eight years (after the first ten) for each teacher to renew himself and to gain insights—for the purpose of becoming a better teacher.

Schertz Heads Drive

Ronald B. Schertz '58, president of the Alumni Association, is heading the 1964-65 Alumni Faculty Fund and invites all alumni to support the project. Plans this year include solicitation of all alumni either personally or by mail.

He and John H. Liechty '42, director of alumni relations, believe that the response to the 1963-64 Alumni Faculty Fund was one of the best to that time.

Alumni have appreciated Goshen's teachers and their contributions to the church and to higher education. And because Goshen has not funded a program for retired teachers or for those nearing retirement age, operating funds—money that could be used for instruction—would need to be used.

In turn, the teachers have appreciated Goshen's retirement and sabbatical program—a great advantage to Goshen in securing and retaining its high quality faculty.

Unless alumni designate their gifts, they will be contributing toward the 1964-65 Alumni Faculty Fund.

Board Meeting Set

The executive committee set Saturday, February 6, 1965, for a meeting of the 35 members of the board of the Alumni Association.

John H. Liechty says members will help decide the 1965-66 alumni project, take part in panel discussions, and hear a progress report on Goshen's 75th Anniversary Development Program.

They will meet in the Alumni Memorial Dining Room for a luncheon. Members staying for the weekend can see the Maple Leafs varsity play Huntington College that evening in the last home basketball game of the season.

A Major Part of 75th Anniversary For Alumni, Says Pres. Mininger

Paul E. Mininger '34, Goshen's president, in announcing the 3½-million dollar development program on October 19, said alumni can play a very important part in getting ready to celebrate in 1969 Goshen's 75th anniversary of its founding.

Over the next five years, the alumni fund, a significant source of contributions, might total $400,000, as alumni continue to show high interest in Goshen's program of higher education.

Also, special gifts — including cash, property, bequests, and annuities — from alumni can be most helpful, he said. The president is looking to the church and the community, as well as to the alumni, to help raise $1,000,000 in special gifts.

To Serve Their Sons and Daughters

The 75th Anniversary Development Program will meet present demand for more adequate facilities and help get Goshen College ready to serve the increasing number of students — from alumni families, the Mennonite Church, Northern Indiana, and others — who will be seeking admission.

Pres. Mininger indicated that the sons and daughters of alumni will help bring the predicted total full-time enrollment to 1,195 by 1969, 285 more than this year. By the fall of 1973, the comparable figure is 1,370, 460 more than this year. Predictions beyond that have not been refined, but there is every indication that growth will continue.

A Million Dollar Library

Earmarked in the program is a million dollar library to be ready for occupancy by September, 1967. The president says there are no plans yet for groundbreaking. It will depend on how rapidly Goshen gets funds as to when it accomplishes this goal.

Two other buildings are a residence hall to accommodate at least 100 women and to be ready by the fall of 1967, and a residence hall for 132 men, to be ready by the fall of 1969. Together, they are estimated to cost $675,000.

In addition, an estimated $390,000 will go toward enlarging and renovating existing buildings, $75,000 for research, $300,000 for endowment, and $885,000 for operating budget that includes $150,000 for scholarships and student aid and $475,000 for adding new teachers and for faculty sabbaticals and retirement.

Sons and daughters of alumni will benefit from the use of the new library, to cost $1,000,000.

New Count of Goshen's 10,199 Alumni Shows One-Third Within 40-Mile Radius of Goshen

Of Goshen College's 10,199 alumni, 3,413, or just slightly more than 33 per cent, are living within 40 miles of Goshen. The count was made last month in the alumni office after it had gathered information on the June and August graduates.

The 40-mile circle, which covers an area slightly over 5,000 square miles in North Central Indiana and South Central Michigan, includes all of St. Joseph, Elkhart, Lagrange, and Kosciusko counties, and part of Laporte, Marshall, Fulton, Whitley, Allen, Noble, and Steuben counties.

In Michigan, the circle includes the cities of Dowagiac, Niles, Schoolcraft, Three Rivers, Colon, Decatur, and Sturgis.

Currently, 2,524 alumni are living in Elkhart County. This is 25 per cent of all the students who have ever attended Goshen College.

Alumni vs. Students

The percentages of alumni living near Goshen and the number of students from local counties are almost the same. For example, between one-fourth and one-third of all full-time students at Goshen are from Elkhart County.

Last year 238 Elkhart County natives, 28 per cent of Goshen's full-time students, enrolled at Goshen. Fifty-three from contiguous counties also enrolled, bringing the total to 292, or slightly over 34 per cent. Part-time students last year from Elkhart County numbered 150; from contiguous counties, 17. This brought the total of local students—Elkhart and contiguous counties — full-time and part-time — to 41 per cent.

Surprisingly, the recent alumni count, when matched to the origins of students, showed:

That the percentage of students coming to Goshen College from homes outside the 40-mile circle is equal, within 1 per cent, to the percentage of alumni who move beyond the 40-mile radius when they leave Goshen College.

Similarly, that the percentage of alumni who have made their homes within the 40-mile radius is equal, again within 1 per cent, to the percentage of students whose homes are within 40 miles of Goshen College.

Interpreting this, John H. Liechty '42, director of alumni relations, says, "For all those who are permanently attracted to the Goshen College area, an almost equal number from that area seek to practice 'Culture for Service' beyond this area."

171 in Graduate School

Presently 171 of Goshen's graduates are in graduate study where they are continuing their higher education for advanced degrees.

According to the records, 743, or 19½ per cent of all Goshen graduates, have taken graduate work at American and European universities. The academic success of any college depends on the work of its students, and 19½ per cent is a significant percentage.

National Human Relations Award to Fulmer '22

Clarence A. Fulmer '22, principal of Wilmington (Del.) High School since 1935, received the national human relations award of the National Conference of Christians and Jews this year.

The award cited Mr. Fulmer "for more than three decades of magnificent service to the people of Wilmington" and Delaware, including his work as co-chairman of the Biracial Committee of Greater Wilmington, and as "officer, worker, and guiding spirit for a score of humanitarian organizations that touch the lives of us all."

The citation concluded: "Upon qualities such as he has exhibited rest our best hopes for a world of peace and freedom."

Mr. Fulmer, from Blooming Glen, Pa., has been teaching for 48 years. He was a rural schoolteacher in Bucks County, Pennsylvania, 1914-18. After he was graduated from Goshen College, he taught in the Academy two years. Then he moved east and taught at Collegeville (Pa.) High School. Since 1925 he has taught, been dean of boys, and since 1935, been principal, all at Wilmington. In 1926 he was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania with the master of arts degree.

The national human relations award is the third Mr. Fulmer has received. In 1960 the Delaware State Chamber of Commerce named him Delaware's outstanding citizen of the year and awarded him the Marvel Cup. Two years later the Freedoms Foundation awarded him the American Educator's Medal.

Frank S. Ebersole '04 Honored by Service Club

The Goshen Exchange Club honored Frank E. Ebersole '04 last summer with its Golden Deeds Award.

Mr. Ebersole was the recipient of the first award to be made by the Goshen club. The award, which includes an engraved statuette, is presented by Exchange Clubs in all parts of the nation to senior citizens who have made outstanding contributions in community service.

Mr. Ebersole was named Goshen College "Alumnus of the Year" in 1949. He served as mayor of Goshen 1943-47. He was a director of the First National Bank of Goshen from 1934 to 1961 and served as its president from 1953 to 1959. He has held numerous positions in the Eighth Street Mennonite Church, Goshen.

Mr. Ebersole taught at Goshen College 1907-12. He has also served on the Mennonite Board of Education and on the board of the Alumni Association of Goshen College.

W. E. Yoder, Professor For 33 Years at GC, Dies

Walter E. Yoder '33, professor emeritus of music at Goshen College and a national music leader in the Mennonite Church, died on October 30 after an illness of two weeks. He was 75 years old.

From 1931 to his retirement in 1957, Prof. Yoder did much to perpetuate the music and singing tradition at Goshen. He had an active part in building the department of music. Under his leadership Goshen offered the first major in music. He developed the A Cappella Choir that has toured throughout the United States and Canada. Through his leading of the singing at Goshen's daily chapels and at Sunday services of the College Mennonite Church, he contributed a great deal to the enrichment of worship.

Prof. Yoder's influence reached beyond Goshen and the influence he had on his students. He helped edit four Mennonite hymnals. He was a member of the music committee for the Church Hymnal, first published in 1927. He edited Junior Hymns, published in 1950, and Songs of the Church, published in 1953.

At the time of his death, Prof. Yoder was co-editor of a joint hymnal revision for the Mennonite and General Conference Mennonite churches. He represented his church in bringing together some 1,300 hymns and arranging them in a useful order for the new hymnal, the manuscript of which is to be completed by the summer of 1965.

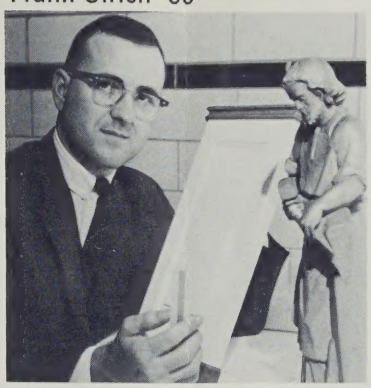
Church Furniture Maker: Frank Ulrich '55



Frank Ulrich '55, Archbold, Ohio, is general sales manager of the seventh largest of 30 manufacturers of church furniture in the United States — Sauder Manufacturing Company.

He played an important part in selling church furniture to archbishops and parish priests in the Roman Catholic Church, which now has invited his company to advertise in the 1965 Official Catholic Directory, which carries advertising only of manufacturers that meet their requirements.

Originally from Roanoke, Ill., Frank went to Goshen two years and continued at Northwestern University night school while he was an accountant at Evanston Hospital in alternate service. One of several applicants at Sauder in 1955, Frank won the job to be sales representative for the company. Now, ten years later, he is advertising and general sales manager with representatives in New York City, Long Island, New Holland, Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne, and Lansing.

Frank says Sauder Manufacturing is now in the middle of a building program, to be completed by February 1, 1965, which will give them the capacity to double their present sales volume, increase their sales staff, and expand to western states.

Sauder Manufacturing makes all the woodwork that goes into a church —pews, altars, confessionals, and pulpits. To add to the beauty of their furniture, they began last year to import carvings from Oberammergau in Upper Bavaria, Germany, and from the Tirol Mountains in Northern Italy.

National architectural judges have made awards to many of the churches where Sauder has been commissioned the furniture. The Church Architectural Guild awarded the Wittenberg University Chapel, Springfield, Ohio, for its excellence of design. Sauder was commissioned to manufacture this furniture from a group of 17 bidders. Notre Dame University awarded a Roman Catholic church in Cincinnati in 1962 the best designed Catholic church in the United States in that year. The Sauder company was commissioned for the manufacturing of its furniture.

Frank said Sauder was commissioned to do all hand carved chancel appointments and pews for the Firestone Chapel of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Akron, Ohio.

All of Sauder's furniture is custom designed and built. The Holy Name Cathedral of the Roman Catholic Church in Steubenville, Ohio, was furnished in 1959; in each of 120 pew ends is a different carved symbol and each is inlaid with gold leaf.

Frank was Sauder's first full-time sales representative. In 1955, when Frank joined the company, Sauder increased its capacity 100 per cent. Since then, it has increased its capacity several times again.

He said he anticipates introduction of a revolutionary development in church furniture design in 1965, and Sauder will be one of the first to have it. Pioneers in the development of the laminated church pew, Sauder has installed one-quarter million lineal feet of laminated church furniture, in addition to many lineal feet of solid wood. Sauder is now waiting for patent rights on its reversible pew cushion that can be dry cleaned, and that was introduced in January, 1964.

Mrs. Ulrich is the former Cara Frey '55. The Ulrichs have one girl and two boys: Jan, 8; John Franklin, 6; and Michael, 3.

Cashier of Illinois Bank: Ronald B. Schertz '58

Elected president last spring of the Alumni Association of Goshen College, Ronald B. Schertz '58 started at the Metamora National Bank as a teller in 1960. Before that he worked summers as a bookkeeper at the Metamora bank and also at a larger Peoria bank. He was made cashier of the Metamora bank in 1962, of which his father, Ray J. Schertz '22, is president.

Active in college as editor of the Goshen College Record and a Motet singer, Ronald now takes specialized courses in Peoria at the Central Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Banking.

Ronald says Metamora National Bank, situated 15 miles northeast of Peoria in Central Illinois' fertile agricultural area, is happy to be part of a small Midwest community that is also home to Metamora Woodworking Company, maker of display racks for a national line of greeting cards, Flynn Drainage Products, builder of corrugated steel drainage culverts, a dairy with retail outlets throughout the metropolitan area of Peoria, and a shop that does machine work for Caterpillar.

Founded in 1878, total assets of the Metamora National Bank are now reaching the 4,000,000-dollar mark, says Ronald, and are growing as Metamora becomes a suburban community 20 minutes commuting time from Peoria.

Mrs. Schertz is the former Leanne Fricke '58. They have a 16-month-old daughter, Kathleen.

Producer of Packaged Drugs: Arthur Weaver '47

Arthur Weaver '47 today is assistant vice-president of Whitehall Laboratories, Inc., Elkhart, Ind., maker of internationally known and advertised packaged drugs, some of which have been old standby favorites of four generations.

Art is responsible for all facets of the Elkhart plant that manufactures, compounds, and packages the Whitehall line and that is shipping point for one-third of the United States.

In addition, Art is responsible for Whitehall's national inventories and production schedules at his and the one other plant, distribution from Whitehall's two plants to four other warehouses in the nation, and all the office detail—performed at Elkhart for the division including maintaining customer files, processing accounts receivable, and running sales statistical analysis reports as required by the company's sales and marketing departments on the IBM 1401 data processing system.

The packaged drug division of American Homes Products, which is Whitehall's parent company, will make up about 20 per cent of American Home Products' $600,000,000 world-wide sales volume this year. Art is responsible for the production of Whitehall's line for the domestic market, not including Canada.

Art started as office clerk for American Home Foods Division (maker of a nationally known food line), also a subsidiary of American Home Products, in July, 1947, before Whitehall Laboratories moved to Elkhart. Six months later he became a cost accountant. In July, 1948, American Home Foods moved out and Whitehall moved in. In September he became office manager for Elkhart, a position he held for 1½ years.

When Whitehall's national office moved from Jersey City in 1949 and the staff increased from 20 to 125 persons, Art became assistant to the office manager from the East.

Two years later he became office manager. In 1955 he became packaging department manager, a position he held for two years. Then he became assistant plant manager; in 1959, plant manager, and in 1960, assistant vice-president, the position he holds presently.

Mrs. Weaver is the former Joan Yoder '45. She taught school a year before she was married to Art, and two years afterward. With Tim, 16, a sophomore at Elkhart High School, Tom, 13, in eighth grade, and Brent, 11, in sixth, Mrs. Weaver is finding time to teach kindergarten in the Elkhart schools half days, as well as keep up with her hobbies of mosaics and ceramics.

Art's hobbies are golf, reading, and handball. He is a member of the Eighth Street Mennonite Church, Goshen, where he serves on the finance committee.

A Rotarian, Art is active in four major community projects. Presently he is a member of the executive board and board of directors and financial vice-president of the Elkhart YMCA, a position he has held for three years. He is a member of the advisory board of the First National Bank of Elkhart County, and a member of the board and vice-president of United Health Foundation of Elkhart County, which handles all research funds for United Fund.

He is assistant treasurer, a member of the executive board, and a director of the Elkhart High School Building Corporation that is constructing Elkhart's new senior high school.

He has also been active in the Elkhart County Mental Health Association the Adult and Child Guidance Clinic, and the Greencroft Villa program, Goshen, for senior citizens.

Two Regional Clubs Elect Officers

Thirty members and friends of the Cleveland, Ohio, Regional Club of the Alumni Association elected James and LaVonne '60 Miller chairmen at its meeting at Friendship Mennonite Church, Bedford, Ohio, on September 25.

Edward Stoltzfus '53, Goshen's pastor to students, told the group what happened to him when he changed from being a person working outside Goshen College (he was formerly a pastor in West Liberty, Ohio) to a person working at Goshen and gave his observations on Goshen's physical plant, student enrollment, academic and religious programs, and educational philosophy.

Elected at the Oregon Regional Club meeting on August 15 at Albany Mennonite Church were Floyd Lapp '61, vice-president, and Bernice Kropf '62, secretary-treasurer, the names of whom were not reported in time for the last issue.

Clarence Burck '47, vice-president last year, became president for the coming year, as reported in the last issue of the Newsletter.

JOHN SAYS:

Your Company May Give A Gift Like Yours to GC

An increasing number of corporations are adopting the matching gift policy. In general, this means that the corporation will match any employe's gift, dollar for dollar, when his gift is made to an alumni fund of an approved educational institution.

Will you check with your company to see if it has a matching gift policy?

If it does, take a minute to complete the forms and include them with your gift.
